PROPERTY HOLDERS TO VOTE ON TWO TOWN BY-LAWS ON OCTOBER 4

In this week's paper will be found copies of two Town By-laws one published in the Express and one in the Beaver.

No. 1 is for the purchase of the Napanee Waterworks.

No. 2 is for the purchase of the canal and water power and all land and buildings owned by the Hydro Electric Power Commission between the canal and the river, and also on the south side of the river as described in detail in the by-law.

The second transaction covered by the second by-law was necessary as a protection for the town waterworks. It would not have been a safe proposition to buy the waterworks and have some other corporation or person own the source of water supply and the buildings in which the power plant was situated.

Both of these transactions are advisable from a business standpoint. Let us briefly analyze the waterworks purchase. The purchase price is $70,000, assuming a $40,000, six per cent. debenture mortgage, and owing to the former owners $30,000 six per cent. debentures. These debentures issued by the town for this total of $70,000 are to cover thirty years. The annual charge for principal and interest to retire these completely will be $5085.44. Now let us see what the result will be, based on the receipts and expenditures for the year ending May 31st, 1920.

Total receipts from water rates	$11,300.53
EXPENDITURES
Insurance $116.02
Taxes paid Napanee 495.87
Rent paid Hydro Elect. Com... 600.00
Commission 12.00
Salaries and supplies 2786.94	4,010.83
Balance	$7,289.70

Thus you will see that on last year's basis, after paying the debentures and interest amounting to $5085.44, there would be a surplus of $2204.26.

The above figures are all based on last year's receipts. The increase in revenue from new consumers during the present year will amount to over $1000. You can certainly see by the figures that the company will be in a position to reduce the rates to the consumers in the town.

By-Law No. 2. The purchase of the Hydro Electric property means this: the Government accepts our thirty year six per cent. debentures for the sum of $15,000. To cover these debentures and the interest thereon means an annual payment of $1089.73, but as in the Waterworks purchase this is more than a self supporting proposition.

The present rentals amount to.....	$1510 00
Less deb. and int. payments	1089 73
Leaves a surplus balance each year of..	$420 27

And besides the town is independent and safe as to their water power.

Next week we will give a detailed statement of the Waterworks assets.

J. E. ROBINSON,
Mayor.

"CALLED BY DEATH"

WILLIAM J. J. MEAGHER

On Tuesday, August 31st, at Grand Rapids, Mich., there passed [illegible] of Napanee, after having spent nineteen years a citizen of Grand Rapids, where he held a responsible position as departmental manager with Horseman & Jones, the largest clothing and furnishing establishment in Michigan. He was taken suddenly ill with appendicitis. After undergoing an operation a change for the worse took place and in spite of all that loving hands could do he passed away. The funeral took place on Friday morning from the residence of his brother, Chas. V. Meagher, 288 Charles St., Belleville, to St. Michael's church. Many were in attendance. The Mass of Requiem was celebrated by Rev. Father Whalen, who also officiated at the interment at St. James cemetery. The many mass cards and floral tributes were evidence of respect for the departed. The pallbearers were Messrs. T. Dolan, J. V. C. Truaisch, C. Bawden, F. Barrett, S. McGuire, and A. Wingrove. The sympathy in his loss are his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Meagher, Mrs. W. A. Frizzell, North Bay; Mrs. W. F. Skinner, Orillia; Mrs. W. B. Cronk, Guelph; and Geo. H., and Chas. V. F. Meagher, Belleville.

LENNOX GARAGE BURNED

Thursday evening of last week the Lennox garage on Mill street was badly gutted by fire. The fire started in the machine shop on the lower floor. One of the mechanics was draining the gasolene from a car, which was undergoing repair, when in some unaccountable manner the gasolene ignited, and although every effort was made to extinguish the flames it soon got beyond control and the firemen were called. In a very short time the firemen had the fire under control and extinguished. The firemen were in charge of the premises, but about 12.30, after a careful examination of the building had been made and discovering no signs of fire, they though it safe to go home. About 3.30 in the morning fire again made its appearance and before the firemen arrived had got a good start and the building and stock were badly damaged. The car which was being repaired was owned by Mr. Robinson, Massey-Harris agent, and was badly burned. The loss on building and contents will be considerable but is pretty well covered by insurance.

That the Musical Program at the Prince Edward Old Boys' Fair will be exceptionally fine will be proven by the fact that the Directors have engaged the Royal Canadian Horse Artillery Band, of the Permanent Force of Canada, for the four days of the Fair. There is in fact a feast of music in store for all who attend same. Besides enjoying a feast of music, the Str. Brockville's excursions to Picton will also enable them to feast on Nature's beauties, as the steamer wends her way along the beautiful shores of the Bay of Quinte. Surely there will be none of our readers who can forego the pleasure of this most delightful trip. Good hot meals served in Dining Hall on Fair Grounds.

For bacon go to H. W. KELLY, he has a superior grade, machine sliced or hand sliced, for 60c.

IMPROVED TRAIN SERVICE

ON THE C. N. RAILWAY FROM THE NORTH TO NAPANEE

Mr. W. R. Kelly, Supt. Ottawa Division Canadian National Railway, and Mr. G. R. Edgley, his assistant in charge of traffic, visited Napanee and Newburgh on Thursday and met a committee of the County Council in County Clerk W. G. Wilson's office. The following arrangements were arrived at to improve the railway service in and out of Napanee to the north. A train will leave Tweed every morning and arrive at Napanee at 9.25 a.m., leaving at 9.40 a.m. for Bannockburn. This will be a strictly passenger and express train. A train will leave Bannockburn every afternoon, leaving as a mixed train to Yarker, and passenger and express to Napanee, arriving at Napanee 5.30 p.m., making connection with the G. T. R. trains for Toronto. This train will remain in Napanee until 7 p.m. when it will return to Tweed. The Picton-Kingston train will run Canadian National to Napanee and G. T. R. to Kingston, instead of going by way of Yarker as at present. The new schedule will come into effect September 19th.

Wicker Furniture.

For some 5,000 years man has been weaving wicker baskets and furniture by sticking one split stake or the weft, into a frame, then weaving the warp in and out. This process has always been a manual one; until a few months ago, in fact, manufacturers of woven baskets, furniture, and baby carriages actually asserted that a machine could never be invented to do this work. But the machine has been built, and is now in use. The industrial importance of the invention is suggested by the fact that a London firm paid $1,500,000 last April, for the British rights.

The invention was made possible by a radical departure from the traditional manual method. Weaving, that is, is not done on the frame, and is the final shape. Instead the frame is built in one part of the factory, and the wicker fabric is woven in another. The last step in the manufacture is, of course, the application of the wicker fabric to the frame.

The loom is a revolving machine, to which the stakes, or weft, are fixed, over a pattern. The wicker, wrapped on two spools at the sides of the loom, is fed into it through an overhead tension pulley. As the loom revolves, the wicker passes from the pulley to the shuttles, two of which are found on each machine. Emerging from the shuttles, the warp is met by star-shaped wheels which press alternate strands to either side. After the warp is woven thus, a metal finger descends and presses it into place. So the weaving proceeds, at thirty times the speed of the best hand weaving, until the basket, chair, or baby carriage fabric is finished. The loose ends of the warp are bent over and firmly secured, finally, by hand, as in the old process.

WRECK IN GORGE.

Buried by Fall of Rock In Cave of the Winds.

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y., Sept. 7.—Two women and a man were crushed to death and two men were injured Monday afternoon when a slide of shale forced out a bridge leading to one of the stairways in the Cave of the Winds under Niagara Falls. A hundred or more others were trapped in the cave at the time but narrow escapes, many being bruised and cut by the falling rock.

The dead are: A. Hartman, Brooklyn; his wife, Louise Hartman; and Clare M. Faust, Pittsburg.

The injured are: T. W. Lee, Pittsburg, and Frank Haehling, Detroit, Mich.

The dead and injured were members of a party of tourists just completing a tour of the cave. With a guide leading, the party was in the middle of a bend of the river in the cave when the slide came, its noise drowned by the roar of the cataract. The guide was not touched by the slide, and his cries attracted to it came from the screams of the women in the party.

Two hours the bodies of the dead it was necessary to take a row boat from the Maid of the Mist steamer, which had been run up as near as possible to the fall. It was a task not a hazardous venture, but the row-boat crew finally brought the bodies out of the pool and regained the steamer.

The incident is the first of the kind that has occurred in the cave since the first stairway was built in 1883. There have been slides before, but only in the winter or early spring.

WANT BAN REMOVED.

Dancing Masters Appeal to American Methodists.

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—All efforts to remove the Methodist ban on dancing, which recently culminated in the closing of a slow minuet type of dance "the Wesleyan," in honor of John Wesley, founder of Methodism, were characterized on Sunday as "a slimy, filthy stream," in a sermon by Rev. Dr. John Roach Straton, pastor of Calvary Baptist Church.

He declared that the dance in practice would soon be called "the Wesleyan Wiggle" and lead to a new series of dances something like "the Episcopal Embrace," "the Congregational Canter" and the "John the Baptist Bounce."

"To many a modern dance," said Dr. Straton, "with its sensuous and shameful heredity, coming as it does through the tango and the shimmy-shake and other abominations that have done so much to destroy the moral ideals of the people—to name a dance after a holy man, is nothing short of an outrage and desecration of a distinct insult to the entire Christian world."

The American National Association of Dancing Masters, in convention here last week, introduced the "Wesleyan" in connection with a resolution asking that the Methodist Church remove its ban on dancing.

"The plea that these dancing masters make," continued Dr. Straton, "that they go to 'promote healthful dance' is idle and entirely beside the mark. You cannot purify a polecat by changing the name to cologne epidemic. You cannot make a rattlesnake reliable."

UNDESIRABLE IMMIGRANTS.

Government Takes Action to Safeguard Population.

OTTAWA, Sept. 7. — Continental immigrants insist on coming to Canada in contravention of the regulations, and such a number of them have been turned back that the Immigration Department has sent sharply-worded cables to the steamship companies, warning them against bringing in such people. They are mostly Poles and Russian Jews.

The immigration regulations do not bar continentals whose relatives or friends here send them a prepaid homes on a continuous journey, but few of them do so. Instead, they deliberately start out and are not eligible. All of them planning to stay in Canada are heading for the cities, while the greater number aim to get into the United States by the back door and evade the restrictions in vogue there. A large number have been rejected and sent back at the expense of the steamship companies. The situation has come to be such that the Department has warned the different lines to conduct such examinations on the other side as will prevent the futile embarkation of ineligibles.

THREE LOSE THEIR LIVES.

Two Trains Collide—Seven Persons Were Injured.

NIAGARA FALLS, Sept. 7.—Seven persons were injured, none seriously, Monday afternoon, in a collision of two trains of trolley cars in the Niagara Gorge. Scores of other passengers on the rear trailers of each saved themselves by jumping when they saw the other train bearing down upon them.

The break in the trolley line caused the first train to stall. The second train rounded a curve and bore down upon the stalled train. Two trailers on the first train were knocked up by the force of the collision.

The injured are: Mary Davidson, 24 years old, 31 Morningstaan road, Toronto; Mollie Cameron, 19 years old, 54 Lewis street, Toronto; John Pollock, 30 years old, 555 Gladstone avenue, Toronto; Oscar Germain, 40 years old, Leighton, Pa.; William Edgerley, 34 years old, 312 Montrose avenue, Toronto; John Cowey, 23 years old, 213 Bovercourt road, Toronto; Mrs. M. Cowey, 31 Albermarle avenue, Toronto.

CHAOS IN COAL MINES

Anthracite Supply Stopped by Injunction.

Although a Two-Year Contract Was Signed by Operators and Miners, the Strikers Led by Enoch Williams of Taylor Refuse to Be Satisfied, and Make Larger Demands Than Were Granted.

SCRANTON, Pa., Sept. 7.—Anthracite operators and miners signed a two-year contract on Thursday night embodying the terms of the award made by the Coal Commission and approved by President Wilson. The agreement was signed under protest by the representatives of the miners, whose scale committee will meet at once for the purpose of asking that the wage agreement be re-opened and the mine workers given such further increases as were granted in the case of the bituminous coal diggers.

The scale committee went on record in a statement to the operators that the award of the commission was "far from being satisfactory," that it was economically unsound, disturbed the differentials, straddled the issues and would create confusion, and react against harmony and co-operation.

The miners were prepared to present their demands at once, but it is understood the operators let it be known they were there for one purpose, and that was to accept the award as approved by President Wilson, and that if the workers had anything further to communicate it would have to go through regular channels, as the mine owners' committee felt that they had no authority to consider any demands.

It was said the miners' scale committee might decide to communicate directly with President Wilson, requesting him to have the wage agreement reopened.

Insurgent defiance of President Wilson and officials of the United Mine Workers of America spread to every corner of the anthracite field on Thursday and during Friday, with the result that the greater part of the industry is practically tied up, and almost certain of being at a standstill until after Labor Day.

Of the 175,000 miners in districts numbers one, seven and nine about 125,000 accepted the insurgent invitation to go on a "vacation," causing the production of about 300,000 tons at a sacrifice in wages of about $625,000 for a single day. About 125 collieries were in idleness, many of them the largest producers in the field.

Efforts are being made in some sections to call out the firemen and engineers and resort to a policy of this sort has caught the operators completely by surprise. Such a successful may result in serious damage to property.

Independent operators faced much better than by the companies. While the main force of the independents was decreased from 25 to 50 per cent., they were able to keep up steam and production on a reduced scale.

Fear of running foul of the state and federal laws prevented the insurgents to inaugurate their strike with utmost care. No disorders of any sort were reported, and no attempt was made to destroy the big companies. Endeavor to turn back from work those who wished to stand by the union organization led to the leadership of Enoch Williams of Taylor, who led the insurgents for many months, directed all movements from his home in Taylor, and issued the first reports began to reach him he declared himself satisfied with the result. He pronounced the "vacation" a success in every way.

The sudden shutting off of the anthracite supply is bound to cause a coal shortage, for operators declared that none of the companies have any coal in storage, and that in recent months there has been no chance to lay up a supply for emergency.

Swallowed Fatal Dose.

OWEN SOUND, Sept. 7. — Mrs. Louisa Hewitt, wife of George Hewitt, of Keppel Township, died on Thursday in the General and Marine Hospital from the effects of bichloride of mercury tablets that she took a few days ago in a fit of mental aspirin. Although she was rushed to the hospital as soon as her mistake was discovered, all attempts to restore her failed.

First Oil-Driven Train In England.

LONDON, Sept. 7.—The first oil-driven express train in England made a successful run from London to Birmingham and back on Friday, over the London & Northwestern line. The train left Euston with a full load and the passengers included Col. F. E. McDonald, inventor of the system. Waste oil is used in the furnace, and about 20 pounds are burnt per mile.

Before the Minister is sent to Rome the Vatican will be asked if he will be received.

Steel Workers In Toronto on Strike.

TORONTO, Sept. 7. —About 100 structural steel men in Toronto left their work Friday to fight for recognition of their union and a wage rate of $1 per hour. They have the support of the nineteen building trades unions of Toronto, whose members will join them as soon as an attempt is made by the steel-erecting companies to place non-union men on their jobs.

A Hard Job.

Missing her two-year-old, the mother of Lena Rivers went to him, and found the youngster in the kitchen on the floor by the coal-scuttle, carefully wiping a piece of coal with his little white handkerchief. "Cleaning coal, mamma," he explained. "Why, conny, come away from there! You an't clean coal." "Yes, mamma, see?" showing the blackened handkerchief. "All comin' off—all black comin' off!"

Why Shouldn't He?

"Poor Hamlet! He certainly had a dog's life of it."

"Well, wasn't he a great Dane?"

BROKE THREE RECORDS.

Attendance Large at Canadian National Exhibition.

TORONTO, Sept. 7.—The million mark at the Canadian National Exhibition ought to be reached with comparative ease this year, as the grand total of attendance for the first six days was 579,000. As the last six days usually average larger than the first six, only an extraordinary break in the weather or a complete departure from all precedent can keep them from attaining the million. The attendance last Saturday was 130,000, compared to 117,000 a year ago. Saturday's figures set a new high record for the opening week, which had previously been 127,000, the attendance on the first Saturday in 1917. The record on Saturday was not the only one established during the week. The attendance of 125,000 on Children's Day topped any previous showing for the same day by 12,500. Tuesday and Saturday were the big factors in the magnificent total for the first half of the Fair. Labor Day also broke records, when 116,000 passed through the turnstiles on Monday of this week, being 7,000 more than on the same day last year. This was the largest crowd that had attended in the history of the Exhibition. Weather conditions have had a great deal to do with the success of the Exhibition so far. Even the oldest frequenters of the Fair cannot remember a succession of better days than during the first week. Although Monday morning was cloudy the weather cleared in time for the parade.

4,000 Mennonites May Go to Abitibi.

WINNIPEG, Sept. 7. — More than 4,000 Mennonites of the old stock will leave Manitoba for the district of Abitibi, in Quebec, if the reports of their investigators, who are returning from an inspection of the territory, are favorable, R. Fletcher, Deputy Minister of Education, said Saturday.

Mr. Fletcher was of the opinion, however, that the 15,000 other Mennonites in the province, who are more enlightened, will stay and comply with the requirements of the Education Act.

The Deputy Minister stated that in the Hanover district, where they went, having farmed for thirty years, they are complying with the law, and are sending their children to school, and take an interest in education. Mr. Fletcher said, that they are at present engaged in constructing new schools.

Submarine Crew Rescued.

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—The story of the rescue of the four officers and 18 men from the partially submerged submarine S-5, after they had been imprisoned under water for 35 hours, was graphically described by the captain, officers and engineers of the Panama liner, the Gen. W. G. Goethals, when she docked shortly after six o'clock Tuesday night. Capt. E. O. Swensen, in command of the General Goethals, said that the chief honors in the rescue of the crew of the S-5 was due to William G. Grace, the engineer, who cut and drilled the 4-inch plates of the submarines for 6 hours and 45 minutes until the hole was large enough to be wrenched open with a crowbar so that the crew could be taken out.

Evict Roman Catholics.

BELFAST, Sept. 7. — Wholesale evictions of Roman Catholic families by Protestants continued in Belfast this week. Written notices have been sent to all Roman Catholics, directing them to leave within twelve hours or their homes would be attacked. The Catholics declare that they are greatly outnumbered, were leaving in hundreds. Gen. Bainbridge, commanding the British troops, is making a determination vainly attempting to halt the evictions.

At a mass meeting of Protestant shipyard workers on Friday, a resolution was adopted demanding mobilization and arming of the Ulster Volunteers.

Premier Ends Vacation.

LUCERNE, Switzerland, Sept. 7.—Mr. Lloyd George will leave Switzerland early this week, without holding any further conferences here.

The Premier, says his son, Major Lloyd George, added, would not attend the meeting to be held Sept. 15 at Aix-les-Bains, when Premier Millerand of France and Premier Giolitti (Italy) will hold a conference.

Syrian Archbishop Visits Canada.

KITCHENER, Sept. 7. — Archbishop Kouri of Souhr, Mount Lebanon, who is on an official visit to Canada from the Patriarch of Mount Lebanon, and visiting the Syrian people throughout America, arrived here on Saturday. The archbishop is accompanied by his secretary and Rev. Father Louis Soad of Sydney, N.S.

Germany Sends a Protest.

LONDON, Sept. 7.—According to a Berlin wireless despatch the German Government has protested to the Warsaw Government against the alleged violation by the Poles of the East Prussian frontier. The wireless also says that a report to the Petrograd Government declares that crops in wheat-producing Russian provinces are complete failures.

Preserving Birds.

Preserving birds as game is only one part of the duty of the Government. They are even more valuable as enemies of noxious weeds and insects. As the farmer's best friends, though he is too often oblivious of the fact. Those who care nothing for their beauty of plumage and song will recognize their utility instance. Yet the birds have been too long the prey of their human hunters. Some steps have been taken, though extermination in consequences. To protect them in the United States and Canada will accomplish much, though to one the protection of many of the migrants complete Mexico and Central American countries should join in the work.

Two Women Hanged.

Records show that two women have been hanged in Canada. The first execution took place in Toronto on December 14, 1827, when Julia Murdoch was hanged for poisoning her mistress, Mrs. Henry. The second woman was Hilda Blake, who was hanged in Brandon in the winter of 1899-1900 for the murder of a Mrs. Lane, of Brandon, about July 1, 1899.

STILL REFUSES FOOD

Lord Mayor MacSweney is Sinking Rapidly.

British Government Takes Firm Stand and Refuses to Permit Irish Leader to Escape Sentence by Means of Hunger Strike Though Many Appeals Have Been Received by Premier Lloyd George — Slow Process of Suicide Continues.

LONDON, Sept. 7.—Lord Mayor MacSweney's condition is precarious and his doctors are apprehensive, was the information furnished by members of the lord mayor's family here Monday afternoon. It is the twenty-fifth day of the prisoner's hunger strike. The fact that he has held to life this long is a surprise to the physicians. His mind is still clear. He has given no indication of breaking his strike voluntarily and the Government has shown no indication that it will release him or adopt forcible feeding.

Premier Lloyd George has replied to the negative to the message of Mayor Hylan, of New York City, urging the Premier to release Mayor MacSweney, of Cork, from prison. The Premier in his reply, despatched Saturday from Lucerne, Switzerland, said briefly but firmly that he could not interfere with course of justice and law.

Except for his message to Mayor Hylan, Premier Lloyd George remained silent in face of the fact that he is being bombarded from all over the world with telegrams and cablegrams asking that the lord mayor be released.

His attitude is summed up in the expression: "The lord mayor is the master of his own destiny."

Bonar Law, Chancellor of the Exchequer and Government spokesman in the House of Commons, has wrote to J. Middleton, secretary of the Labor party, affirming the Government's decision not to release the lord mayor. After stating that the Government's position was made clear in the Premier's letter of August 5, which he has little to add, Mr. Bonar Law proceeds to state that MacSweney was one of the leaders of the Irish Republican army, which declared itself at war with the forces of the crown, and, according to his own written words in one of the seditious documents for which he was convicted, he and his followers had determined to pursue their own ends, asking no mercy and making no compromise.

Had he been taken at his word and dealt with according to the universal practice among civilized nations, says Mr. Bonar Law, he would have been liable to be shot. Instead, he was tried by a legally-constituted tribunal, sentenced to a specific term of imprisonment and given all the privileges of a political prisoner.

"To release such prisoners," asserts Mr. Bonar Law, "would be nothing short of a betrayal of loyal officers, on whose devotion to duty the fabric of social order in Ireland rests."

Since MacSweney's arrest, it is pointed out in the letter, 15 officers have been brutally and treacherously done to death without chance of defending themselves.

"Surely," continues the letter, "the sympathy extended to the lord mayor, whose condition is due to his own deliberate act, is due rather to the bereaved widows and families of the murdered men. Written notice the Government fully realizes how large a part sentiment plays in all human affairs, and, if it were possible, it would delight the heart of the rebels of the English King, who said of an opponent: 'He is determined to make himself a martyr, and I am equally determined to prevent it'."

Mr. Bonar Law declares, in conclusion, that the Government cannot take a course involving the entire breakdown of the machinery of law and Government, and that if the lord mayor dies in prison the responsibility will rest in some degree upon those who, by their repeated appeals, have encouraged the belief that the Government would prove insincere in its determination.

According to the Weekly Despatch, Father Denis Mathieu, a Benedictine priest of Belfast, which city has resided in England for forty years and officiated at MacSweney's marriage, brought him some water from Lourdes, France. He, however, was too weak to see his visitor.

Washington Silent.

NEW YORK, Sept. 7. — Peter J. MacSweney, brother of the Lord Mayor of Cork, has made public a copy of a letter which he said he had received from the State Department at Washington, setting forth "it was not in accordance with established relations to the British authorities" against the lord mayor's arrest. Mr. MacSweney had requested the State Department to intervene in his brother's behalf.

The letter, dated August 24, said: "The receipt of your letter of August 18, 1920, and your telegram of August 21, 1920, is acknowledged, calling the department's attention to the alleged arrest and imprisonment of your brother, Terence MacSweney, by the British authorities.

"In reply I beg to inform you that, from precedents established in cases of this kind the department is not in a position to make protestations to the British authorities against the arrest and imprisonment of one who, like your brother, is not a citizen of the United States.

"I beg to remain sincerely,

"G. Howland Shaw."

"For the Secretary of State."

Would Banish Hearst Issues.

MONTREAL, Sept. 7. — A resolution, recommending the suppression of Hearst publications, news services and films in Canada, will be one of the matters to be considered by the Conference of Canadian Clubs, to be held here on September 6 and 7. This will come up as a resolution submitted by the Hamilton Canadian Club.

Had Thrilling Escape.

LONDON, Sept. 7.—The situation in Mesopotamia shows improvement in the disturbed areas, but is becoming tenser in districts not yet in open rebellion, according to a War Office communication. The Sijwas Railway station was attacked on August 29 and is still besieged by increasing numbers. The British political officers at Munsifah were saved from assassination by fanatics by escaping in an airplane. Several other stations have been attacked.

In Northeast Persia the Reds have made no southward move from Resht.

THE PORT OF MONTREAL

RANKS NEXT TO NEW YORK ON THIS CONTINENT.

No Other Harbor In North America Handles Such a Volume of Traffic, As It Is Both an Ocean and Inland Shipping Centre—It Is Nearer to England Than New York.

How many Canadians realize that the port which handles the greatest volume of traffic on the continent, next to New York, is not Boston, nor Philadelphia, nor Baltimore, nor New Orleans, nor San Francisco, but the Canadian river—port of Montreal,—and that in spite of the handicap that the harbor is open for barely more than seven months a year?

Nowhere else in the world is there to be found a port, accessible to all but the very largest ocean-going vessels, one thousand miles from the sea. London, Liverpool, Glasgow, Hull, Hamburg, Rotterdam, Antwerp, Le Havre, Hong Kong, Shanghai—these all have riverside docks, but whereas they are located on estuaries, Montreal is set deep in the interior of the continent. And yet, in spite of being a thousand miles inland, Montreal is nearly 250 miles nearer Liverpool (via Belle Island) than is New York.

Montreal is unique as a port in another momentous respect. Not only is it the farthest inland harbor for sea-going vessels, but it is also the outlet of the greatest system of interior waterways to be found in the world. From Thunder Bay to the Lachine Canal grain carriers can reach Montreal from the very centre of the continent,—1,600 miles of continuous navigation by lake, river and canal. It is true that at the present time only vessels whose draft does not exceed 14 feet can travel between Montreal and Lake Erie, but if the project of the deepening of the St. Lawrence Canals, now being considered by the International Waterways Commission, be carried out, then ships of 20-foot draft will be able to pass from Fort William to Montreal—and thence across the Atlantic.

Montreal thus possesses the combined advantages of a sea and an inland port, with a considerable margin of proximity to the British Isles over any Atlantic port in the United States. Moreover, as the converging point of the three great transcontinental railways of Canada, Montreal is the natural exporting and collecting depot of the rail-borne as well as the water-borne products of the interior. If geography alone conferred economic favors, the most neglected place on the continent is certainly not the pleasant island where the waters of the strenuous Ottawa and the lordly St. Lawrence embrace one another carelessly in the broad expanse of Lake St. Louis and then dash exultingly arm in arm, towards the sea, through the riotous passage of Lachine.

The present magnificent terminal and harbor facilities which Montreal now offers are largely the work of the exceedingly efficient Harbor Commission of Montreal, created under the Department of Marine and Fisheries in 1907. The three commissioners of whom W. G. Ross is chairman, and of whom M. C. C. Ballantyne, the present Minister of Marine was an original member have unhampered control over the harbor on both sides of the river from the Victoria Bridge to the lower end of Montreal Island, a distance of sixteen miles.

The work of the Harbor Commissioners is simplified by two great natural advantages which the harbor of Montreal possesses. First, the St. Lawrence river is remarkably free from sediment, so the commissioners' dredges, unlike those of the Toronto Harbor Commission, have comparatively little to do. Second, Montreal is the only port in the world accessible to ocean craft, which is not affected by tides. Three rivers, a hundred miles lower down the river, being the tidewater limit. This circumstance greatly facilitates the berthing of vessels and simplifies the loading and discharging of cargo. Moreover, being set thus deeply inland, Montreal does not require breakwaters to protect its basins and shipping from rough water. On the other hand the strong currents of the river and the ice-shoves in the spring have made it necessary for the commissioners to construct an embankment over a mile long to protect the upper part of the harbor and the entrance to the Lachine Canal.

The commission has now constructed over eight miles of wharfage capable of berthing at one time one hundred vessels over 200 feet in length. The twenty-one steel ocean freight sheds are all triple-decked, so that goods for export can be trucked out from freight cars on to one floor, imports be swung up from the hatches on to the second floor, and wheat be shot down the chutes from the roof-top conveyors into the hold of the second ship,—all three operations proceeding simultaneously. The unloading of heavy machinery is greatly facilitated by the Harbor Commission's 75-ton floating crane.

The huge dry dock which Vickers built in England and has towed out to Montreal is capable of lifting a 25,000-ton ship. When I inspected it three vessels were being simultaneously replated within its capacious waist.

Animals' Ages.

Cats although said to have "nine lives," usually live about fifteen years. The hare, rabbit, and squirrel if they escape the sportsman's gun, seldom outlive the seventh year. The fox, on an average dies off at fifteen, and the wolf lasts out to twenty years. Horses and donkeys will not often exceed twenty-five years, although Copenhagen, the Duke of Wellington's famous steed, lived till twenty-seven. Some wild horses, however, have even attained sixty years of age. Pigs have been known to live thirty years. Sheep average ten years, and to that period can breed and thrive well. But some extraordinary instances are recorded of rams having reached the unlucky thirteen, while a ewe is mentioned by Somerville as having reared a pair of lambs when shearing and having had two pairs yearly for fifteen years, afterwards producing single lambs for two years more. Cows range fifteen years of age. Bears rarely go beyond a score years, and the rhinoceros has been known to live through that age. Lions are recorded long lived, but on an average they do not exceed twenty years. There are exceptions, however. Pompey, who died in the Tower of London in 1750, was nearly an octogenarian! After twelve years decrepitude usually commences in dogs, and increases so rapidly that by the fourteenth year they are burdens to themselves and people generally. Dogs have lived to twenty years of age.

Standard Headstones Will Be Used in War Cemeteries

For All the Dead Heroes

RUDYARD KIPLING has rebuked the relatives of British soldiers killed in the war who have been protesting against the action of the Imperial War Graves Commission, of which Kipling is a zealous member, in deciding that the headstones in Britain's war cemeteries must be standardized, and refusing permission to individuals to erect tombstones of their choice. What he has said will be of intense interest to the thousands of Canadians whose loved dead lie in France.

The subject was raised in Parliament in connection with a vote of $4,955,000 for the Imperial War Graves Commission. Winston Churchill; War Minister, stated that Britain's war cemeteries number 4,000 and that half a million tombstones must be erected.

"The work will occupy ten years in any event," said Mr. Churchill. "If individual choice in the matter of headstones is permitted, it will take a generation." Sir James Remnant agreed that there should be limitation with regard to the cost and size of monuments, but declared that, within these limits, the relatives were clearly entitled to say what type of headstone should be erected.

Mr. Kipling's letter was then read. It is as follows:

"We have no grave to go to. Our boy was missing at Loos. The ground is, of course, battered and ruined beyond all hope of any trace of him being recovered. I wish some people who are making this trouble would realise how more than fortunate they are to have a name on a headstone in a known cemetery."

Mr. Burdett-Coutts, also a member of the Imperial War Graves Commission, expressed his agreement. "Those who act for the nation," he said, "ought not so to act that a mourning woman in cottage or tenement can say to herself, 'My man made the great sacrifice, died the same death for the same cause; why should he not have as beautiful a monument?'"

Mr. Asquith made a speech in support of standardisation and was followed by J. H. Thomas, the Labor leader. The latter told of a visit to a battlefield cemetery where he saw the grave of an unidentified British soldier between those of Raymond Asquith, eldest son of the ex-Premier, and young Tennant, the poet. He plucked a leaf from the grave and after he had mentioned the episode at a public meeting he received a letter from a blind woman in Leicester who said she would like that same grave was that of her son. Thomas had, he added, the melancholy pleasure of sending her the leaf, and an assurance concerning the position of the grave.

At the close of the discussion the vote of $4,955,000 was agreed to.

Wireless Stations.

The Marconi Wireless Company proposes to the British Government to erect wireless stations in England, Egypt, India, East Africa, South Africa, West Africa, Canada, West Indies, Straits Settlements and Australia, thus linking the whole empire in one wireless chain.

SUN DANCE LODGE AT TORONTO

The exhibit of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company at the Toronto Exhibition this year is unique and very representative of the glories and beauties of the Canadian Pacific Rockies. It is housed in the popular Railway Building and immediately catches the interest of the visitor. It is the C.P.R. Sun Dance Lodge and quite typical of the Rockies and the Indians of the West. The premier attraction on entering the building is the huge Sun Burst which throws its rays around the gigantic tepee in which are garnered the side scenes portraying in miniature form some of the gorgeous settings which none but the Canadian Rockies can produce. The roof of the Indian tepee is hand painted with symbolic writings and signs typical of the Rocky and Plain Indians. The side embellishments are finished in white birch, the bark of which was also a favorite with the Indian not only for the construction of his canoe but for the building of a quick camp fire. On each side of the entrance office accommodation has been worked into the setting where information of every description can be obtained and telegraph service is also installed. This has the tepee finish and real Indian tepee poles transported from the west for the purpose have been used. The lighting effect of these elaborate interiors is electric with coloured lights and tents as shades producing an interesting effect.

The scene from Sulphur Mountain overlooking Banff Springs Hotel in the foreground and the beautiful Rundle and Tunnel Mountains, and the stretch of the Bow river in the background is undoubtedly realistic. A fine model of the C. P. R's famous hostelry built specially for the occasion by Messrs H. Mongeau Limited, Montreal, is electrically illuminated and gives the visitor the impression that he is paying a visit to Banff instead of sweltering under the atmosphere of an exhibition. The Banff Hot Springs famous for their health giving qualities, especially for curing rheumatism, were known to the Red men long years ago and accidentally discovered by some engineers when surveying for the C.P.R. The huge swimming tank hidden from the view, but situated directly in front of the hotel has a depth of water from three to eight feet and is one of the great summer attractions. The beauties of Banff are to be found on all sides. There are mountains to the right, mountains to the left, mountains in front and also behind, and the Bow river runs right back of the hotel and reminds one of opals with its pale green color, and its ever changing fires. The view, in fascinating, and one does not feel dull or suffer from ennui, in this delightful spot. The scene cannot be eclipsed for grandeur, and Lake Louise can be located on the opposite side of the tent certainly gives it a close running, and many people prefer the mountain location high up amidst the innumerable peaks of the Canadian Rockies. This picture is a representation which depicts the Canadian tourist ground for the grandeurs of Lake Louise from almost any spot, behind the Chateau with a glimpse of the mountain [illegible] the gigantic glacier on the mountains in the rear. On arrival here feelings of wonder, awe, and admiration fill the mind, compelling a reverential silence. The Victoria Glacier which forms the background feeds the lake which is shown by real water, while the towering peaks of Mount Lefroy and Mount Aberdeen are observed in the distance. The model of the Chateau is another masterpiece from Morgan's. The frieze of Indian decorations and the magnificent transparencies lend a perfect finishing touch. The Sun Dance Lodge effect by the remaining sides of the "Lodge" is one of typical white birch interspersed with spruce and balsam. Beautiful real Indian mats made from Cedar bark and there are also reproductions in miniature of the famous totem poles from Alert Bay.

There is also on exhibition a very valuable collection of Indian relics from the West Coast, all of which are original and many over a hundred years old. They include eating and cooking utensils made of wood and whalebone, bows and arrows, coffins and tom-toms, cedar chests and models of Indian houses. The illumination effect is perfect combining sort of deep twilight. The scenic paintings were executed by Mr. Hal Ross Perrigard assisted by Mr. A. Robinson, and the decorations by Mr. Perrigard assisted by Mr. James Crockart all of Montreal. During the exhibition as a whole, fifteen or twenty minutes could be spent to advantage in the Railway Building as it is not only an historical representation but educational from every viewpoint.

Canada and the Empire.

Canada was the first colony to federate its scattered provinces into a Dominion, in 1867, an example soon followed in part by Australia, New Zealand and South Africa.

Canada was the first Dominion of the Empire to issue a penny post.

Canada was the first of the Dominions to establish Government wireless telegraph stations.

Canada made possible the all-British Pacific cable by contributing 5-17 of its cost.

Canada has one-third of the entire area of the British Empire.

More than one-half of the white population of the Empire's Dominions is in Canada.

A Flying Lochinvar.

The first couple in Canada to elope in an airplane were Charles Henderson and Miss Florence MacKenzie, of Dodsland, Sask. Henderson, who founded the town of Dodsland and is a prominent farmer in the district and proprietor of the weekly paper there, and Miss MacKenzie, Dodsland, school teacher, whose romance has been watched with interest by all the villagers, pulled off the elopement on June 21 during a sports carnival, while hundreds of people were assembled in town.

They slipped into the residence of the minister, were married in record time, and raced a mile in an automobile, pursued by scores of other automobiles, to a waiting plane on the prairie. Pursuers caught up just as the plane was starting and showered the couple with rice. Piloted by Lieut. H. S. McClelland, of Saskatoon, the plane carried the couple to Winnipeg, after heading west first to give pursuers the impression that they were going to Calgary.

The Path to Health

For many thousands of women the Path to Health has certainly been through Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. When this great remedy was first introduced, and for many years after, skeptics frowned upon its curative claims, but as year after year has rolled by and the little group of women who had been cured by it has since grown into a vast army of hundreds of thousands—doubt and skepticism have been swept away as by a mighty tidal wave, until today this purely vegetable medicine is recognized as the greatest remedy for woman's special ills in the world. This is because it is a wonderful tonic and reconstructor which acts directly and favorably upon the feminine organization and is a specific for that purpose.

Dunraven Charges

IT is commonly said that international contests tend to promote friendship between the countries represented. This is so sometimes, and at other times it is not so. When the athletes are high-class sportsmen they take defeat gracefully and success modestly. When they are out to win, no matter what happens, not much international good is likely to come of their efforts. Sometimes, even when the contestants themselves are good sportsmen, their supporters and backers make trouble, and we recall that on the occasion of the last Olympic games some American newspapers gave numerous examples of bad taste and bad manners. But the most regrettable incident arising out of an international contest was undoubtedly that with which Lord Dunraven was connected in the days when the America cup is to be raced for again, the Dunraven case is being frequently mentioned, and comparisons between the two challengers, highly uncomplimentary to the noble lord, are being made.

The Valkyrie, Lord Dunraven's yacht, raced against Defender in 1895 and was beaten. He had no public complaints to make at the time, but the following November there appeared in the London Field a statement from him to the effect that he had been treated with sharp practice on the part of the Americans. He alleged that after the yachts had been measured the cup defender's trim had been altered and her load water line length increased by shifting her lead ballast. The charge made a profound sensation. It was difficult to believe that sportsmen of the type of the Americans who conducted the race would tolerate such trickery, and it was equally difficult to believe that Lord Dunraven would make such a charge except upon the most unassailable grounds. The managing directors of the Defender was C. Oliver Iselin, who repudiated Dunraven's charges and asked for an official investigation. The New York Yacht Club acted at once and appointed a committee composed of J. Pierpont Morgan, William C. Whitney and George L. Rives, with powers to add to the number. Captain Mahan, the naval historian and tactician, and Edward J. Phelps, late ambassador to England, were chosen, and Joseph H. Choate was appointed counsel.

A more distinguished committee could hardly have been chosen in the United States and everybody knew that it would disclose the facts no matter whom they might damage. Lord Dunraven announced his willingness to return to the United States and repeat his charges, and under examination by Mr. Choate he stood by everything he had asserted. The investigation showed that the whole trouble had arisen through the Valkyrie arriving for the contest with her tanks, bulkheads, etc., removed. This made it necessary under the rules that the same things should be removed from the Defender. In order to replace the weight two tons of lead in forty-two pigs were put aboard the yacht at New Rochelle. This did not bring her down to her former water line and another ton in twenty-one pigs was put aboard at the Erie Basin. It was laid on the cabin floor until it could be stored. Then it was found that in order to secure it properly each pig would have to be cut in two. The pigs, therefore, were taken aboard the tender Hattie Palmer, there cut and taken back. By the time the work was completed it was three o'clock in the morning.

Well might Lord Dunraven or the members of his crew who saw this nocturnal activity think there was something peculiar about it; but a single question would have revealed the facts. At the investigation half a dozen reputable witnesses told exactly what had happened, and the investigating committee decided that the charges were based upon a misapprehension. It added that had not Lord Dunraven been obliged to return to England before the evidence was all in he no doubt would have withdrawn his charges. The implication was that a withdrawal and apology were now expected of him. Lord Dunraven, however, remained silent and next February Mr. Lewis Cass Ledyard offered a resolution asking that his lordship's resignation from the New York Yacht Club should be received. The noble earl, however, sent a cable asking that action be delayed until the mail arrived containing a letter from him. When the letter was read it was found to contain no apology, and shortly afterward another meeting of the club politely expelled Lord Dunraven.

Why he did not apologise when it was demonstrated that his grave charges had been made under a misapprehension it is difficult to understand. Yachting opinion in England did not sustain him, and the incident created more unpleasantness than probably any sporting event in a hundred years. Those who believed the Dunraven charges thought that if Americans of the highest class would resort to such trickery and other Americans of the highest class would shield them, then there could be no such thing as good sportsmanship in the United States. Americans, on the other hand, wondered what sort of sport the average Englishman was when a peer of the realm would make a baseless accusation and then fail to withdraw it.

SECRETS OF AGONY COLUMN.

A Study of the London Times by a British Expert.

The Times under present management seems to be a distinct commercial success. Analyze that success. The general news of the Times, an comparison with the London press as a whole, is little better now than at any time during the last hundred years, but it is presented better, it is arranged more skilfully. The Times is the newspaper, for instance, that is to a man who has lost his sight may ask anyone to read the paper out to him, and he, though sightless, can tell this reader to which page to turn for the special news he wants, for example.

The Times, you tell me, is to-day 28 pages. Look to page 17 and read out the headlines of the leaders. Now turn over to page 19 and read the social paragraphs. Afterward go back to the opening pages and tell me about sport." And so on, and so on. The careful arrangement of its news is nowadays a vital commercial principle, and it needs not only considerable technical skill on the part of those who "make up" the newspaper, but also the full recognition by whoever is at the head of the administration that a careful arrangement of news and a close adherence day by day to the same positions is a primary essential in the success of a newspaper.

Just one other illustration of those principles—short advertisements. The Times has been working them up with considerable success. It began with its "agony" column on the front page, where personal announcements are published. This column has been devoted to this class of advertising for certainly well over eighty years. It has long been known that an "agony" advertisement may contain a secret code.

During the war it was called to serve on parliamentary committees which had to examine, among other matters, this very thing. It was then openly stated, what for a long time had been common knowledge in Fleet street, that many of these "agonies" are written within the office. The writers need a certain knack, but having it they will turn out day by day, surprising examples of genuine thrills. And these personal advertisements, assumed to conceal tragedies, mysteries and romances, are not only widely read by the readers of the paper, but they are copied into other Journals and thus actually advertise the columns in which they appear. This is good advertising, sound business.

The Times has lately made a clever move to assure that its short advertisements should be read. It is to assume that they are intended specially to puzzle. So a fashion plate by a fashion artist of high repute is printed daily among these advertisements, and attention is drawn to it by a headed paragraph on a prominent news page. It cannot surely be urged that either in arrangement of news or development of advertising there is anything derogatory to the standard of journalism. Yet these are the principles to which, in these days of severe competition and high cost of production, I maintain a daily paper must conform.

Efficiency.

A certain floorwalker in a big department store is likely to lose his place if he does not improve in his manners. "Gracious," exclaimed a fat woman rushing up to him just after losing sight of her husband. "I'm looking for a small man with one eye." "Well, madam," suggested the floorwalker, "if he's a very small man, perhaps you'd better use both eyes."

Coomassie Is the Capital Of the British Colony That Lives in Ashantiland

MAJORIE and Alan Lethebridge, the special correspondents of the London Telegraph in West Africa, write as follows from Coomassie, capital of the British Colony of Ashantiland:

At the present day Coomassie looks more like an Indian town than any other on the coast, and it is the pride of its residents that socially it is also like India. There are real grass tennis courts, a real regimental band, and, before the war the best polo team in the colony. Such it is to-day, and yet, only twenty years ago, the quaint little fort in the centre of the town was the scene of one of the grimmest sieges of Britain's many frontier wars.

Only the fact that all eyes were turned on South Africa at that time prevented the siege of Kumasi from taking its proper place in history. But we who have experienced the inconveniences and discomforts of the "Siege de Kumasi" and the know how much is needful in this part of the world to make life even bearable, can appreciate somewhat the sufferings borne by the defenders of the fort and the agonizing suspense that they endured until they heard the first shots of the relieving force.

The chief commissioner of Ashanti now lives in the fort which gave its name to protection to Capt. Bishop, Lieut. Ralph and Dr. Hay, with their 125 soldiers, during those interminable weeks. One now has an evening gin and bitters on the very spot from which those three officers could see the fires of burning villages and hear the wailing of starving women and children. The Ashantis themselves seem to have shot their last bolt in the way of "frightfulness," however, and no longer rank among the braver tribes of the colony. Only one trace of the romance of the past remains. Where is the golden stool of Ashanti? It disappeared in 1896 and has never been seen since. On it the Ashanti chiefs had sat and dispensed their quaint form of justice from the earliest days and, as far as is known, it is still concealed in the innermost recesses of their land. But it would be a brave European who openly attempted to track it to its hiding place, and there is just a possibility that it has been surreptitiously sold during a period of financial stress.

Kofo Karikari, the King of Ashanti in 1873, behaved in an even more sacrilegious manner. He secretly opened the mausoleums of his ancestors and robbed their bodies of the golden ornaments without which no Ashanti of any means is ever lowered into the tomb.

It would never have been discovered had not the lynx eyes of the queen-mother observed that the favorite wives of the king were inexplicably wearing rings and bracelets of antique workmanship. A little investigation, and she denounced him publicly.

An admission of his guilt was the only thing left for King Kofo. He had sold the major portion of his hoard to a local merchant, who informed his chiefs that he intended to blow himself and them up with gunpowder in order to obliterate his shame. "We are quite willing to die as you request," was their reply, "but blow yourself up first." It is perhaps superfluous to add that King Kofo did nothing of the sort.

Monument to M. P.

The special committee of Parliament, appointed to consider the form of the memorial to the late Lieut.-Col. G. H. Baker, M.P., recommends that a monument in marble, of about six feet six inches in height, the figure representing Col. Baker in uniform, shall be placed in a niche in the new Parliament Buildings. The figure will be placed on a pedestal four feet in height. The monument will bear the inscription:

"Lieut.-Col. George Harold Baker, M.P., 5th Mounted Rifles, Killed in Battle on June 2, 1916, in Sanctuary Wood. Erected by order of the Parliament of Canada."

The cost of the monument will be in the neighborhood of $12,000.

PRINTING

We have recently made some new additions to our Printing Plant as well as great improvements to our building, which places at the service of our customers a plant equal to any to be found outside of the large cities.

We are in a position to take care of your orders for all kinds of Printing whether the Job be large or small.

While the ever advancing cost of paper and everything else which we use renders advances in price absolutely necessary, we assure you you will always find our prices reasonable and our material and workmanship of the best.

Other SALADA warehouses are situated in Toronto and Boston.

Daly-McCall.

A very quiet wedding took place on September 4th, at the home of Rev. and Mrs. George W. McCall, Brockville, when their eldest daughter, Marion, was married to Roland O. Daly, youngest son of Mrs. Daly, of Toronto, and the late Denis Henry Aldworth Daly, of Napanee. The ceremony was conducted by Rev. H. Hunter Hillis of Brockville, in the presence of the only the immediate relatives, the out-of-town guests being Mrs. Denis Daly, Miss Kathleen Daly, and Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Daly, all of Toronto. Mr. and Mrs. Daly left for a trip through the New England States, and at the end of September will return to Toronto to reside at their new home, 33 Heath street west.

Sudden indeed was the death of Mr. Addison Scott on Tuesday evening. While in the act of opening his box in the Napanee post office, and while speaking to an acquaintance he was suddenly taken with heart failure, and though Dr. R. A. Leonard, postmaster, was almost immediately at his side death had come to him. Mr. Scott has not enjoyed the best of health for some time, and gave up his farm some months ago on account of the state of his health and removed to Napanee where his wife died in June, shortly after their removal to town. The funeral took place from his late residence on Thursday morning. He leaves two sons, Messrs. Blake Scott, of Buffalo ; and Roy Scott, in Saskatchewan ; and one daughter, Miss Edith, in Napanee.

Mission Band Conference.

The district conference of the Presbyterian mission bands was concluded on Friday afternoon, and the fifty young delegates were given a motor trip about Kingston. Only two officers were elected, Miss McStephen, Picton secretary, and Miss May Daly, Napanee, treasurer.

Return Engagement of Bert Johnston.

Last fall the Bert Johnston Magic and Fun Show gave three shows in Wonderland to capacity business. The general public were well pleased with the show, so Mr. Geo. Tustin made arrangements with Manager McArthur for to have this company here for Wednesday and Thursday nights of the fair, at Wonderland. Mr. Johnston will introduce all new tricks, many of which are his own original, presenting by request the famous box mystery which such a talk last fall. The company have with them that great violinist, Mr. A. J. Smith, known as the world master of the violin and imitations. Also carrying their own orchestra, under the personal direction of Eveline Johnston. They render some classy selections as well as many popular airs, pleasing the music lovers of all classes. As the company are here for two nights the programme will be changed each night. There is plenty of good clean comedy running all the way through the programme, so that every one is amused.

Services Appreciated.

The following letter received by the secretary of the Napanee Fire Brigade speaks for itself, and needs no comment :

Napanee, Sept. 2nd, 1920.

Walter Metcalf,
Sec'y Napanee Fire Brigade.

Dear Sir :—

Will you please convey to the Chief and members of the Napanee Fire Brigade my thanks for the very efficient manner in which they protected my factory from fire on the night of September 2nd. Am enclosing my check for twenty-five dolars to be used for such entertainment of the members as the brigade may direct.

Yours, etc.,
ALPINE WOOD.

On behalf of myself and the members of the Napanee Fire Department I wish to publicly thank Mr. Alpine Wood for the words of appreciation expressed in the above letter. Appreciation of service rendered helps wonderfully in the efforts of the Fire Brigade to protect the property of our citizens from destruction and loss by fire. Many thanks are also expressed for the check for twenty-five dolars.

FORCED TO TAKE SON FROM SCHOOL

Grateful Mother Tells How Tanlac Brought Back Her Boy's Health

"I am more grateful than I can tell you for what Tanlac has done for our boy Arthur. For it has completely restored his health and built him up wonderfully," was the statement made by Mrs. Florence Mulines, of 62 Peter stret, Toronto, the other day.

"His illness was brought about by the air raids. During the war we were in England, and you people here can't imagine what we went through when those Lor'-ole Zeppelines and Gothas came over, droppping their bombs and aerial torpedoes, and the noise of our guns trying to shoot down the German aircraft was as terrifying as though one was actually at the front. As the result of that experience, Arthur, who is just fifteen, got into a frightfully nervous condition, which affected his general health as well. We had the greatest difficulty to get him to eat and his stomach was in a terrible state, for he had indigestion very bad and his food formed gas and turned sour. He was always complaining of terrible headaches and had spells of dizziness. He got into such a badly run down condition at last that we had to keep him away from school. He lost all his boyish activity and spirits and at night would lie awake for hours. We tried everything we could think of to try and build him up and make him well, but nothing seemed to meet his case.

"Then when the war was over we came out here to Canada and heard about Tanlac and got some for him. Very soon we noticed that he was eating much better and sleeping soundly at night. It wasn't very long before he was playing just like other boys, and was full of life, and everybody was remarking what a wonderful change had come over him. He has gained eleven pounds in weight and is to-day a bright, healthy, happy boy. How can I help praising Tanlac, and you may be sure that I shall always recommend it whenever I get the chance."

Tanlac is sold in Napanee at WALLACE'S Drug Store, in Camden East by R. J. OSTER, in Wagarville by S. JACKSON.

BASEBALL

The snappiest game of the season was pulled off on Lanor Day at the driving park, when the "Irishmen's Nine," from Kingston, played a team composed of men from Gibbard's furniture factory. Clean sport, by clean sportsmen, was exhibited all through the game, and with the exception of one dispute, the umpire's decision was accepted without comment.

In the first two innings neither side scored, but in the third, Ada from Kingston, made a get-away and scored the first run. Fitzgerald, following him, got around to 3rd and Nickie to 2nd. It was then that "Mag," the reliable old catcher for the local team, gave a real exhibition of ball and shut off further scoring.

The Kingston boys played star ball and gave such splendid support to Ada, their pitcher, that it was not until the 6th innings that the local boys could get started. Huffman connected, and made a two bagger, followed by McNeil, who made a fluke single bringing Huffman to 3rd. Art Rooks, known as Babe Ruth the second, came next to bat and lying heavily on the ball drove it over the left fielders head for a home run. Ross Loucks also scored that inning bringing the score up to 4-1. In the 4th Kingston came back at them and scored two runs. In the same innings Huffman, who is heavily all day, got around to third, followed by Rooks who got to 2nd. Then "Pope" Loucks tried to break the pitcher's heart and made a three bagger, bringing in Huffman and Rooks. This put the game on ice. Kingston scored in the 8th, but "Prince" Pyke in right field made a grand stand catch and shut off further scoring. There was no scoring in the ninth, and the game ended 6-4 in favor of Gibbard's nine. Hearty cheers were given to all players, and the crowd expressed their feelings by declaring it the cleanest and best game of ball played in Napanee for years.

The line-ups were as follows :

Napanee—H. Johnston 2nd, R. Huffman cf, H. McNeil 1st, A. Rooks lf, A. Pope c, Ross Loucks c, J. Johnston ss, F. Huffman 3rd, Ray Loucks p, J. Miles, spare.

Kingston—Fitzgerald ss, Fowler 3rd, Nickle 1st, Connoly c, Devlin 2nd, Merrideth lf, Hammond cf, Bennett cf, Ada p, Purdy, spare.

Ray Loucks, pitcher for Napanee, struck out ten men, and Ada, pitcher for Kingston, struck out six men.

A wonderful time is in store for all who attend the Prince Edward Old Boys' Reunial Fair at Picton on September 21, 22, 23, 24, as the Directors are making special efforts to have it outrival any county Fair in the Dominion and they have the buildings, the grounds, and a reputation that will enable them to do so. On the first and second days of the Fair the steamer Brockville will run excursions from Napanee to Picton. These will be the last water trips of the season, and will prove a delightful outing for all who take them in. Fare for the round trip, 75 cents.

BY-LAW NO.

By-Law to confirm an agreement made between the Corporation of the town of Napanee and the Napanee Waterworks Company for the purchase of the land and waterworks of said company and to authorize the issue of debentures for $70,000 for the purchase thereof.

WHEREAS the Napanee Waterworks Company has agreed to sell and the Corporation of the town of Napanee has agreed to buy the land and waterworks of said company in the town of Napanee for the sum of $70,000. as defined by and upon the terms and conditions set out in a certain agreement bearing date the first day of September, A.D., 1920, a true copy of which is attached hereto as schedule "A" to this by-law and

WHEREAS it is desirable that said agreement be ratified and confirmed, and

WHEREAS the Provincial Board of health has approved of the establishment and acquisition of the said waterworks system, and

WHEREAS in order to provide for the payment of the interest upon the mortgage of said land and waterworks and the bonds of said company secured thereby referred to in said agreement it will be necessary to raise annually by the sum of $2400.00, until said mortgage matures on the 1st day of June, A.D., 1930, or until such time as said mortgage may be sooner discharged, and

WHEREAS in order to provide for the payment of the purchase money for said land and waterworks it will be necessary to raise the sum of $70,000, by the issue of debentures of the face value of $70,000 of which amount, $30,000 shall be issued immediately and $40,000 as soon as it can be arranged with the holders of the bonds for their redemption at the discharge of the mortgage and in any event within five years from the passing of this by-law, and

WHEREAS it is desirable to make the principal of said debentures payable by yearly instalments during the period of thirty years from the date thereof of such amounts respectively that the aggregate amount payable for principal and interest in any year shall be equal as nearly as may be to the amount so payable for principal and interest in each of the other years, and

WHEREAS it is undesirable to issue and sell the said $40,000 of debentures and have the proceeds of the sale thereof before the same can be applied in the redemption of said bonds and the discharge of the mortgage, and

WHEREAS it is desirable that all of said debentures be issued payable in thirty equal, annual installments of principal and interest, and

WHEREAS the amount required to be raised annually by special rate for paying the principal and interest on the $30,000 of said debentures is the sum of $2179.47 and

WHEREAS the amount required to be raised annually by special rate for paying the principal and interest on the $40,000 of said debentures is the sum of $2905.97, and

WHEREAS it is expected that the revenue from the said waterworks for water rates and service charges will be sufficient in each year to meet the said annual assessments of principal and interest and the interest on said mortgage, and

WHEREAS the amount of the whole rateable property of the town of Napanee according to the last revised Assessment Roll is $1,564,440. and

WHEREAS the amount of the existing debenture debt of the said Municipality is the sum of $103,621.39 whereof no principal or interest is in arrears.

THEREFORE the Municipal Council of the Town of Napanee enacts as follows :—

1. That the said agreement bearing date the first day of September, A.D., 1920, made between the Corporation of the town of Napanee of the first part and the Napanee Waterworks Company of the second part, set out in schedule "A" hereto is hereby ratified and confirmed.

2. The Municipal Council of the Town of Napanee is hereby authorized to complete the purchase of the land and waterworks of said company according to the terms of said agreement.

3. For the purpose of carrying out the terms of said agreement and paying the annual interest on the said mortgage and the bonds of said company secured thereby referred to in said agreement, there shall be raised annually by a special rate on all the rateable property in the said town of Napanee until said mortgage is discharged and said bonds paid the sum of $2400.00 and in the event of any of the said bonds being paid before the maturity thereof then the amount so to be raised annually shall be reduced by the amount of the annual interest upon said bonds so paid before maturity.

4. For the purpose of further carrying out the terms of said agreement and to provide for debentures to the face value of $30,000 to be delivered to the company as part payment of the purchase money as provided in said agreement the Municipal Council of the town of Napanee shall issue debentures of the said town, to the amount of $30,000 in sums of not less than $100.00 each, bearing interest at the rate of six per centum per annum payable yearly. Said debentures shall all bear date the first day of November, A.D., 1920, and the principal and interest thereof shall be payable in thirty equal yearly installments during the next thirty years after the date thereof and the amount of each yearly installment of principal and interest shall be $2179.47.

5. For the purpose of further carrying out the terms of said agreement and to provide for debentures to the face value of $40,000 for the purpose of paying the $40,000 bond issue and discharging the mortgage against said lands and waterworks as provided in said agreement the Municipal Council of the Town of Napanee shall issue, when necessary, and in any event within five years from the date of the passing of this by-law, debentures of the said town of Napanee to the amount of $40,000 in sums of not less than $100.00, each bearing interest at the rate of six per centum per annum payable yearly. Said debentures shall all be dated on the day of the issue thereof and the principal and interest thereof shall be payable in thirty equal yearly installments during the next thirty years after the date thereof and the amount of each yearly installment of principal and interest shall be the sum of $2905.96.

6. Coupons for each yearly installment of interest may be attached to each of the debentures so authorized to be issued under this by-law.

7. The said debentures shall be signed and issued by the Mayor and the treasurer of the said Town of Napanee or such other persons as may by by-law be authorized to sign the same and the Clerk shall attach thereunto the Corporate Seal of the Municipality and the coupons shall be signed by the Treasurer whose signature may be printed or lithographed thereon.

8. Said debentures and coupons shall be payable at the office of the Town Treasurer at Napanee.

9. During thirty years the currency of the said debentures amounting to $30,000 authorized to be issued under this by-law the sum of $2179.47 shall be raised annually by a special rate sufficient therefore on all the rateable property in the Town of Napanee for the purpose of paying the amount due in each year for principal and interest in respect of the said debt of $30,000.

10. During thirty years the currency of the said debentures amounting to $40,000 authorized to be issued under this by-law the sum of $2905.96 shall be raised annually by a special rate sufficient therefor on all the rateable property in the Town of Napanee for the purpose of paying the amount due in each year for principal and interest in respect of the said debt of $40,000.

11. This by-law shall come into force and take effect from and after the passing thereof.

Schedule "A" referred to in the foregoing by-law and which is incorporated therewith, shewing the agreement referred to in said by-law between the Corporation of the town of Napanee and the Napanee Waterworks Company.

Memorandum of Agreement made this first day of September, A.D., 1920.

Between :—

The Corporation of the town of Napanee, hereinafter called the Corporation, of the first part, and

The Napanee Waterworks Company, hereinafter called the Company, of the second part.

WHEREAS the Company are the owners of all and singular that certain parcel or tract of land and premises situate, lying and being in the town of Napanee, County of Lennox and Addington, and Province of Ontario, being composed of that piece of land or angular form lying between the lands owned by the Grand Trunk Railway Company and lot number ten on the east side of East street according to a plan made by A. B. Perry, P.L.S., filed in the Registry Office of said county on the 27th day of October, 1875, which said piece of land may be more particularly described as follows : commencing on East street at the north west corner of said lot number ten, thence easterly along the northern boundary of said lot, two chains to the north east corner of said lot, thence notherly in a line parallel with East street forty-seven links, thence in a westerly direction and along the southern limits of the said lands owned by the Grand Trunk Railway Company two chains and forty-five links more or less to East street, thence along the east side of East street one chain and seventy-three links more or less, to the place of beginning, subject to the reservation of a roadway over a strip of land twelve feet wide off of the south side thereof and adjoining said lot ten, together with the waterworks in the Town of Napanee and all and singular the rights of the Company in and about the pump houses and the rights to use of water from the hydraulic canal and the pumping machinery, boilers, whole water wheels and shafting and all appliances and furniture of the company together with the pipes mains, hydrants, gates and valves and property of every kind of the company all of which assets and property of the company hereinafter called the "land and waterworks" and

WHEREAS the company has been carrying on business in the Town of Napanee under and by virtue of the terms of an agreement between the parties hereto bearing date the 10th day of January, A.D., 1920, which said agreement is still in force, and

WHEREAS the company by an indenture bearing date the 31st day of May, A.D., 1890, and registered in book H for the town of Napanee as No. 4422 did mortgage said land and waterworks to the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company of the City of New York upon certain trusts set out in said indenture for the sum of forty thousand dollars ($40,000) upon the terms and conditions more particularly set forth in said mortgage, which said mortgage is collateral to the bonds of said company for the sum of $40,000 and bearing interest payable half yearly on the first day of June and December at the rate of six per centum per annum until said principal sum and interest has been fully paid and satisfied, and

WHEREAS the time for the payment of the principal sum of said mortgage and the bonds to which said mortgage is collateral has been extended until the first day of June, A.D., 1930 and

WHEREAS the provisions of paragraph 31 of said agreement dated January 10th, A. D., 1910, the Corporation has the right at any time while said agreement is in force to take over and assume said land and waterworks, and

WHEREAS the company has offered to sell to the Corporation said land and waterworks together with all contracts and leases for the sum of $70,000, and

WHEREAS the Council of said Corporation deem it advisable to accept said offer and subject to ratification by the electors, entitled to vote, has accepted said offer.

NOW THEREFORE, this agreement witnesseth that in consideration of the premises and of the covenants, promises and agreements herein contained the Corporation and the Company hereby covenants, promise and agree each with the other as follows :—

1. The Company will sell to the Corporation and the Corporation will buy from the Company the said land and waterworks for the sum of $70,000 upon the terms and conditions hereinafter set forth.

2. The said purchase is to be completed on the first day of November, A.D., 1920, upon which said date the said land and waterworks are to be conveyed to the Corporation by a good and sufficient conveyance free from all encumbrances, save and except the said mortgage of $40,000.

3. Upon the said first day of November, A.D., 1920, the said purchase price of $70,000 is to be paid to the company by the Corporation assuming the said mortgage of $40,000 which said mortgage the Corporation agrees to pay according to the terms thereof and by delivering to the company thirty year serial debentures of the Corporation of the face value of $30,000 bearing interest from the first day of November, A.D., 1920, at the rate of six per centum per annum payable yearly, the principal and interest whereof are to be paid in current money of Canada in thirty (30) equal yearly installments, the first of which installments is to become due and payable on the first day of November, A.D., 1921.

4. The Company is to pay all interest upon said mortgage up to the first day of November, A.D., 1920, and is to pay the proportionate part of the taxes chargeable against said company that will have accrued up to the first first day of November, A.D., 1921.

5. All accounts for service collected by or payable to the company are to be apportioned between the parties hereto, the company receiving only that portion accrued up to the first day of November, A.D., 1920, and the Corporation receiving that portion accruing after said date.

6. The Company further agrees to sell and the Corporation agrees to buy the following goods and chattels which are now included in the sale of the land and waterworks, that is to say, all oil, fuel, iron and specials, hydrants, gate boxes, corporation and curb cocks and small service pipes and fittings on hand on the first day of November, A.D., 1920, and available for the purposes of the Corporation at the actual invoice price thereof.

7. This agreement is conditional upon ratification by the electors of the Town of Napanee entitled to vote as provided by the Municipal Act and amendments thereto, and the Corporation agrees to submit the same for ratification by the said electors as soon as practicable.

As witnes the corporate seal of the Corporation and the hands of the Mayor and Clerk and the corporate seal of the company and the hands of the President and Secretary the day and the year first above written.

Signed, sealed and delivered in the presence of

The Thirteenth Commandment

Her heart sank. Her guess was right. His bank account was dry. It had gurgled out in amusing her. She felt that there was something here that would take a bit of thinking about —when she had rested enough to think.

The taxicab swung into Fifty-ninth street and drew up to the curb. Clay helped Daphne out and said to the chauffeur, "Wait!"

He said it with just the tone he had used when he said to the waiter, "Check!"

When Clay had kissed her his seventeenth farewell and was wondering how he could tear himself away from her without bleeding to death, Daphne pressed the bell.

Instead of her droway mother opening the door half an inch and fleeing in her curl-papers, Bayard himself appeared in his bathrobe and pajamas.

"Bayard!" Daphne gasped as she sprang for him. "What on earth brought you home so soon?"

"Money gave out," he laughed.

"Hello, Clay," he said as he put forth his hand. "Mother tells me you've been secretly engaged to my sister all this time, you old scoundrel! How are you? What's the good word?"

"Lend me five dollars," said Clay.

CHAPTER VI.

The meeting of Daphne and her new sister-in-law was not what either would have expected or selected. Daphne was tired in body and soul, discouraged, footsore and dismayed about her love and her lover. She had reached the door of the apartment in the mood of a wave-buffeted, outworn castaway, eager for nothing but to lie down in the sand and sleep.

Daphne could imagine the feelings of her brother's wife when she reached her home after a long ocean voyage, a night landing, the custom-house ordeal, and the cab ride among the luggage, and found a mother-in-law asleep in her bed and a sister-in-law yet to arrive!

Bayard and Leila, serene in the belief that Daphne and her mother had gone back to Cleveland, entered the apartment without formality and went about switching on lights, recovering their little home from the night with magic instantaneity.

Mother Kip's awakening came from the light that Bayard flashed in his bedroom. Leila had a lovable disposition, but she was tired, and all the way up in the overloaded cab she had thought longingly of the beautiful bed in her own new home, and had promised herself a quick plunge into it for a long stay. How could she refuse to find a strange woman there—even though she bore the sacred name of mother-in-law?

Mother Kip ordered Bayard and Leila out of their own room and when she was ready to be seen she had so many apologies to make and accept that the meeting entirely lacked the rapture it should have expressed. Even a mother could hardly be glad to see her son in such discouraging circumstances. All three exchanged questions more and more perfunctorily, and kept repeating themselves. The most popular question was, "I wonder where Daphne is?"

They could not know that she was hobbling down the wilderness of Riverside drive. She, too, was thinking longingly of her bed. But long before she reached it her mother had moved in and established herself across a good deal more than half of it. It was a smallish bed in a smallish bedroom.

Leila fell asleep in her tub and might have drowned without noticing the difference if her yawning husband had not saved her life—and very cleverly: he was too tired to lift her from the water, so he lifted the stopper and let the water escape from her. She almost resented the rescue, but eventually got herself to bed in a prettily sullen stupor.

From some infinite depth of peace she was dragged up protesting. Bayard was telling her of Daphne's arrival. Doggedly she began to prepare an elaborate toilet, but Bayard haled her out before she was ready. This was the final test of Leila's patience and of Daphne's.

It was a tribute to both that they hated the collision more than each other. Their greetings were appropriately emotional and noisy, and they both talked at once in a manner that showed a certain congeniality.

When at length Daphne went to her room she observed her mother's extra-territorial holdings. She stretched herself along the narrow coastline in despair of rest. But she was too tired to worry or lie awake and she slept thoroughly.

The next morning the three women, about to meet one another by daylight, made their preparations with the scrupulous anxiety of candidates for presentation at court. In consequence, breakfast was late and the only man there, except the evanescent waiter from the restaurant below, was Bayard.

A troop of business worries like a swarm of gnats had wakened him early. He had escaped some of them in Europe, for the honeymoon had been a prolonged and beatific interlude in his office hours; but marriage was not his career. His career was his work, and that was recalling him, rebuking him, as with far-off bugle alarms.

It Was a Tribute to Both That They Hated the Collision More Than Each Other.

He was so restless that he merely glanced at the headlines of the paper. He was preoccupied when he kissed his mother and Daphne good morning, and he paced up and down the dining room like a caged leopard till Leila arrived.

Her trousseau had included boudoir gowns of the most ravishing description and she wore her best one to breakfast. Daphne and Mrs. Kip made all the desirable exclamations at the cost and the cut of it. Even Bayard paid her a tribute.

"Isn't she a dream, mother? Aren't you proud of her, Daph?"

They agreed that she was and they were, and Bayard drew his chair up to the table with pride.

It was the bride's last breakfast and the housewife's first. That is, Leila, was not really a housewife; only an apartment wife, with nearly everything done for her except the spending of her time. She had to spend her own time.

This breakfast was the funeral of the honeymoon, and Leila hung with graceful dejection over the coffee cup. It might have been a cup of hemlock, judging from the posture of her wo. But the he-brute, attracted by a portion of a headline, and his newspaper and was gulping it down with his coffee.

He was so absorbed in the mere clash of two Mexican generals and the danger of American intervention that he forgot the all-important demands of love, and ignored the appalling fact that he had only a few minutes left before he must take his departure.

It was a pitiful awakening to the new Mrs. Kip. She was being taught that she was not important enough to keep her husband's mind or his body close at home. He had said that she was all the world to him, and, behold! she was only a part of it. He had said that he could think of nothing else and desired nothing else but her. Now he had her and he was thinking of everything else. He had to have a newspaper to tell him all about everything in the world.

The sight of Leila's anguish over the breakfast obsequies of the honeymoon chilled Daphne's hope of marriage bliss like a frost ravening among peach blossoms.

Her sympathies would ordinarily have been with her brother in any dispute between him and his wife. But this was a dispute between Bayard and love. It was sacrilegious for him to go on reading the Times when his bride had so much more important things to discuss. He heard her discuss them as through a morning paper darkly, and he made the wrong answers, and finally he snatched out his watch, glared it in the face, gasped, and attacked the last of his breakfast like a train-catcher at a lunch-counter.

It was thus that he heard Leila wail, "What's to become of me all morning?"

Bayard stared at her sharply, but spoke softly enough: "Why, I don't know, honey. There ought to be plenty for you to do. The Lord knows there's enough for me at the office."

"All right," sighed Leila. "I'll be brave and worry through somehow, till noon, with my sweet new sister's help. But we'll come down and lunch with you. About what time do you go out to luncheon, By?"

Bayard's answer was discouraging: "This is one of the three days a week when the heads of the firm always lunch at Delmonico's in a private room. I'm afraid I can't lunch with you today."

"And you'll leave me this whole terrible day? I can never exist so long without you."

"I'm mighty sorry, honey. But men must work, and-so-forth. I've been away too long. The office needs me. And I've spent a lot of money, and I've got to go down and earn some more to buy pretty things for my beauty."

This brightened her in a way he had not expected, and a little too far beyond his hopes. Gloom left her face like a cloud whipped from before the sun. She dazzled him with her smile.

"Oh, I know what to do! Daphne and your mother and I can go shopping."

Bayard's heart flopped. He wondered what on earth more there was in the shops that she could want to buy. She had come to the marriage with her trousseau only partly completed, on account of the haste of the wedding. But she had bought and bought in Europe. She had made his honeymoon anxious by her rapacity for beautiful things to wear. And now that they had come to New York with their old trunks bulging and new trunks bought abroad bulging, and had paid a thumping sum at the custom house, now she was still eager to go shopping!

What he wanted to do was to quit buying for a while and sell something.

He did not say this. Love was slipping the bandage off one eye; but it had not yet removed the sugar stick that stops the tongue from criticism.

Leila grew more cheerful at a terrifying rate: "Go on to your old luncheon, my dear child, and Daphne and your mother and I will go on a spree in the shops. Then we'll all have a banquet tonight and a theater, and if we're not too tired, a supper; and if you're very good I'll take you to one of those dancing places afterward. I'll buy the theater tickets myself. I'll get good ones. I want to save you as much trouble as I can, honey. So run along to your office and don't worry about us. But you must miss me—frightfully! Will you?"

He vowed that he would, and he meant it. She was a most missable creature.

He rose to leave, but she stopped him to say, "What play shall we see?"

This was the occasion for elaborate debate till Bayard gave signs of trumpeting his wrath and bolting.

Leila graciously released him only to call him back to say that he had forgotten his newspaper.

"I left it for you. Don't you want to read it?" he asked. "I can get another at the subway station."

She shook her head: "There's nothing interesting in the papers. I'm just from Paris, and I know more about the fashions than they do."

Bayard shuddered a little, inly. The times were epic. Immortal progress was being made as never before: ancient despotisms were turning into republics, republics were at war with one another; constitutions, labor problems, life problems, all social institutions, were being ripped up and remade, all the relations of masters and men, mistresses, children, wives, animals.

Yet Leila said there was nothing in the papers! Revolutionary news meant to her a change in the fashion in sleeves, the shift of the equatorial waistline a trifle nearer the bust or a trifle nearer the hips, the release of the ankles from tight skirts. The great rebellion in her world was the abrupt decision of the dressmakers that after years of costumes clinging more and more closely to the human outline they would depart from it in every way possible. Leila was interested vitally in what women would wear and what they would leave off, and grandly indifferent to which nations were shooting at which. Bayard hesitated, appealed again to his watch, gasped at the hour and the minutes, kissed Leila violently, kissed Daphne and kissed his mother and rushed for the door. Leila put out her arms again.

"I must be last," she cried, and as he bowed into her arms she kissed his ear and whispered, "and first, too, and all the betweens."

Bayard was a business man from his cradle days. He loved promptitude. He blushed to arrive late at his office and set a bad example to his stenographers and clerks. It was his creed that success comes to those who arrive earlier on the battlefield than the others, fight harder, stay longer there, and end every day with the next day's maneuvers clearly realized as part of the next month's campaign.

There was need for concentration in his business, for he had brought back from Europe a sense of great disaster in the air. And there was no encouragement in American business except as instinctive feeling that the worst must be over because it had lasted so long.

CHAPTER VII.

It was a time when everybody was cutting down appropriations, reducing expenses. Cities, counties, states, nations were all paying the penalty of former extravagances by present economies. Rich people were positively boastful of their penuries.

The three women assailed a list of things for Daphne's trousseau with the ruthlessness of an auditing committee. They cut out this and that, decided that this gown could be omitted or postponed, that waist could be had in a cheaper quality, these parasols were not really necessary, those stockings need not be so numerous all at once.

And yet even Mrs. Kip admitted that the whole array was far beyond the reach of her husband's means. Still she insisted that he could provide a partial trousseau at least. She herself would "go without things" for ten years if necessary.

Daphne, however, was haunted by the vision of her father's harrowed, money-hungry face. When her mother reminded her that it was his last chance to do anything for her, she retorted, "Yes, and it's my last chance to do anything for him."

Her pride was wrung by her plight. She must either go shabby or cause acute distress to one or both of the men that were dearest of all in the world to her. She must leave behind her a burden of debt as a farewell tribute to her father, or she must bring with her a burden of debt as her dot.

"No!" she cried, with a sudden impatient slash at the Gordian knot. "Clay will have to take me just as I am or take back his diamond ring he wished on me."

Her defiance was not convincing. Her mother protested:

"It's not Clay that you have to consider. He'll never know what you have on. It's the guests at the wedding—and your old friends and the neighbors. You don't want them to think we're poor and that your father is marrying you off cheap, do you?"

Daphne flared back, "It seems mighty foolish to go and make yourself really poor in order to keep from seeming poor, especially when you never fool anybody except yourself!"

Leila, with the magnanimity of a native spendthrift, tried to soothe the fever of the rebel: "Let's go prowling around, anyway. I may see something I want for myself. Bayard dragged me away from Paris before I had finished shopping. There are several things I need desperately."

The three wise women set forth; they joined the petticoated army pouring from all the homes like a levee en masse, a foray of pretty Huns.

They reached the alluring place where the famous Dutilh, like an amiable Mephistopheles, offered to buy souls in exchange for robes of angelic charm.

In the window, on a dummy, with no head, no feet, and a white satin bust,

In the Window on a Dummy With No Head, No Feet, and a White Satin Bust Hung a Gown That Seemed to Cry Aloud to Daphne.

hung a gown that seemed to cry aloud to Daphne:

"I belong to you and you belong to me! Fill me with your flesh and I will cover you with an aureole."

The three forlorn women understood the message instantly. They looked at one another, then, without a word, entered the shop, doomed in advance.

Leila was known to Dutilh and he greeted her with an extravagant impudence that terrified Mrs. Kip:

"You little devil!" he hissed. "Get right out of my theater. How dare you come here after letting somebody else build your trousseau?"

Leila apologized and explained and he pretended to be mollified as he pretended to have been insulted. Having thus made the field his own, he turned to Daphne, studied her frankly with narrowed eyes as if she were asking to be a model, and sighed:

"Oh, what a narrow escape!"

Daphne jumped and gasped, "From what?"

"That gown in the window, that Lavin that was born for you. You must have seen it—the afternoon one in parchment-toned taffeta and tulle."

The women, astounded by his intuition, nodded and breathed hard, like terrified converts at a seance. He was referring to the one that belonged to Daphne, and he ordered her to get into it at once.

She demurred: "I'm afraid of the price. How much is it, please?"

"Don't talk of money!" Dutilh stormed. "I hate it! Let's see the gown on you." He called one of his tawny manikins. "Help Miss Kip into this gown, Maryla."

A mournful-eyed beauty led Daphne into a dressing room and acted as maid. Daphne stepped out of her street suit into the Parisian froth as if she were going from chrysalis to butterfly. Maryla was murmurous with homage as she fastened it together and led Daphne forth.

Mrs. Kip felt as if she had surrendered a mere daughter and received back a seraphic changeling. Daphne was no longer a pretty girl; she was something ethereal, bewitched and bewitching. If she could own that gown her mother would be repaid for all her pangs from travail on. She would accept the gown as advance royalty on any future hard-ships.

Daphne looked about for Leila, but Leila was gone. She reappeared a moment later in a costume almost more delicious than Daphne's—a tunic of peach-blow tulle caught up with pink rosebuds and hanging from a draped bodice of peach-blow satin that formed a yoke low on the hips. And there was a narrow petticoat of peach-pink satin. It was as if peaches had a soul, as perhaps they have.

Perfect happiness is said to need a bit of horror to make it complete. The happiness of the two girls did not lack that element. The price of their glory furnished it. They asked the cost with anxiousness.

Said Dutilh: "To Miss Kip I'll let it go dirt cheap for three hundred and twenty-five. The one Miss—er—Mrs. Kip has on I'll give away for—umm, well—say the same price."

Daphne and her mother were sickened. But Daphne was suffering one of those gusts of mania that ruin people. Her soul or souls clamored to wear that very gown that very afternoon. Even to take it off would hurt like flaying.

Leila had the same feeling. Her appetite for resplendent gowns had grown with exercise.

Dutilh took pity on them: "Look here," he said, "I'll make the price two hundred and seventy-five. It's giving them away, but you are such visions in them!"

It was a big reduction, but it left the price still mountain high.

"I want something to wear tomorrow afternoon," Leila said. "I've got to go to a tea and my sister has to go with me."

Daphne had not heard of the tea, but she wanted somewhere to go in that gown.

Dutilh smiled: "Nothing easier. Take the duds with you or let me send them. Where are you living now?"

Leila made a confession: "The trouble is, Mr. Dutilh, that I'm just back from Paris and I haven't a cent left, and Miss Kip is buying her trousseau and has spent more already than she expected to."

Dutilh rose to the bait that he had expected them to dangle: "That's simple. Why not run an account with me? Take the gowns along and pay me when you like."

Leila mumbled, "I should have to ask my husband."

Daphne said, "My father wouldn't like me to start an account."

"Charge it to your sister's account, then, and pay her."

"You say you would charge them both to me?" said Leila.

"Certainly," said Dutilh.

"Send them, then," said Leila, with imperial brevity.

"Thank you," Dutilh smiled. "You shall have them this afternoon. And by the way, I've just remembered a marvelous design by Paul Poiret's. Let me show it to you."

"Come quick; let's run," said Daphne, and she hurried out of the infernal paradise.

They dawdled on, down the avenue, pausing at window after window, each haunting opportunities for self-improvement. But Daphne's joy in her new gown was turning to remorse. She was realizing that that parchment-toned taffeta needed parchment-toned stockings and slippers and a hat of the same era as the gown.

She was startled from her reveries by the sudden gasp of Leila:

"If there isn't Tom Duane just coming out of his club!"

"I met him last night," said Daphne.

"You did? Did he say he knew me?"

"He said that Bayard stole you from him."

Leila was flattered, but loyal: "Nonsense. I was never his to steal. I never loved him, of course. It wouldn't have done any good if I had. Tom Duane's a nonentity."

"He's Awfully Rich, I Suppose," Said Daphne.

"He's awfully rich, I suppose," said Daphne.

"No, not rich at all, as rich people go. But he was mentioned the other day in the will of an old aunt he used to be nice to. He's nice to everybody."

Duane met them now and paused, bareheaded, to greet Daphne with flattering cordiality. She was greatly set up to be remembered. She presented him to her mother, who was completely upset at having to meet so famous an aristocrat right out in the street when she was still flustered over the ferocious price of Daphne's new dress.

"Will you have a bite of lunch with me?" asked Duane.

"We were just going to have something somewhere," said Mrs. Kip.

"My husband would object," said Leila.

"I'm not inviting you," said Duane, "I'm inviting the genuine Mrs. Kip. You may come along as old married chaperon, if you have to."

"But Miss Kip is engaged."

"So I suspected. That's why I'm inviting her. I feel safe."

As they turned east into Forty-fourth street and entered Delmonico's the carriage man saluted Duane, pedestrian as he was, called him by name, and seemed to be happier for seeing him. The doorman smiled and bowed him in by name, and Duane thanked him by name. The hat-boys greeted him by name and did not give him a check. The head waiter beamed as if a long-awaited guest of honor had come, and the captains bowed and bowed.

Duane did not ask his guests what they would have. The head waiter told him in a low voice what he ought to have.

Daphne rejoiced. All luxury was music to her. Fine clothes, fine foods on fine dishes, fine horses, motors, furnitures, fine everything, gave her an exaltation of soul like the thrill of a religion.

New York was heaven on earth. The streets were gold, the buildings of jasper, and the people angels—good angels or bad, as the case might be, but still angels. She wanted to be an angel.

Among the squads of men and women camped about the little tables she made out Sheila Kemble again, in a knot of elderly women of manifest importance.

"Isn't that Sheila Kemble?" Daphne asked.

"Yes, that's Sheila," said Duane, and he waved to her and she to him. He turned back to Daphne. "Awfully nice girl. Like to meet her?"

"I'm crazy to."

"I'd bring you together now, but she's completely surrounded by grandes dames."

He named the women, and Mrs. Kip gaped at them as if they were a group of Valkyrs in Valhalla. It startled her to see them paying such court to an actress. She said so.

"All great successes love one another," Duane explained. "Those old ladies were geniuses at getting born in the best families, and Sheila has earned her place. She looks a bit like your daughter, don't you think?"

Mrs. Kip tilted her head and studied Miss Kemble and nodded. She made the important amendment. "She looks like she used to look like Daphne."

"That's better," said Tom Duane.

"Miss Kip might be her understudy."

"How much does an understudy get?" said Daphne, abruptly.

"I haven't the faintest idea!" Duane exclaimed. "Not much, I imagine, except an opportunity."

"Is it true that Miss Kemble makes so much?"

"I'd like to trade incomes with her, that's all. Her manager, Reben, was telling me that she would clear fifty thousand dollars this year."

Mrs. Kip was aghast. Daphne was electrified. She surprised Duane with another question: "You said Miss Kemble was married?"

"Yes, and has children, and loves her husband. But she couldn't stand idleness. She's just come back to the stage after several years of rusting in a small city."

Daphne fired one more question point-blank: "Do you think I could succeed on the stage?"

"Why not?" he answered. "You have—with your mother's permission—great beauty and magnetism, a delightful voice, and intelligence. Why shouldn't you succeed? You would probably have a peck of trouble getting started, but— Do you know any managers?"

"I never met one."

"Well, if you ever decide that you want to try it, let me know, and I can probably force somebody to give you a job."

"I'll remember that," said Daphne, darkly.

She said nothing more while the luncheon ran its course.

CASTORIA

Fletcher's Castoria is strictly a remedy for Infants and Children. Foods are specially prepared for babies. A baby's medicine is even more essential for Baby. Remedies primarily prepared for grown-ups are not interchangeable. It was the need of a remedy for the common ailments of Infants and Children that brought Castoria before the public after years of research, and no claim has been made for it that its use for over 30 years has not proven.

What is CASTORIA?

Castoria is a harmless substitute for Castor Oil, Paregoric, Drops and Soothing Syrups. It is pleasant. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other narcotic substance. Its age is its guarantee. For more than thirty years it has been in constant use for the relief of Constipation, Flatulency, Wind Colic and Diarrhoea; allaying Feverishness arising therefrom, and by regulating the Stomach and Bowels, aids the assimilation of Food; giving healthy and natural sleep. ABOUT WEANING FOALS

They Should be Nursed at Least Four Months.

A Sudden Change of Diet Not Good for the Young Colt—Wean Him Gradually— General Hints on Rationing and Handling.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

THE age at which foals should be weaned is to a great degree governed by circumstances. Under ordinary conditions it is well to allow the mare to nurse her foal for four months or longer. If, when the foal is this age, the mare is required to do regular work, both will do better if the foal be weaned. On the other hand, if the mare be in fair condition, not required for regular work, and still yielding a reasonable quantity of milk, the foal will do better if not weaned for a month or two longer, and the dam, having no labor to perform, will not suffer.

The ordinary process of weaning, which consists in separating mare and foal, and allowing no further intercourse for several weeks, or until the mare has ceased to secrete milk, and the foal to look for it, is in our opinion, irrational, wasteful and uncalled for.

It is probably unnecessary to state that the colt should be trained to eat chopped or rolled oats, bran, etc.; before the process of weaning commences, otherwise he will surely suffer and grow poor. Experience has taught all breeders and feeders of stock that sudden or violent changes of diet or usage with any class of stock is dangerous, often very expensive. When this is the case with adult animals, it is reasonable to expect it to be more pronounced in the young. Hence, in order to avoid danger of digestive diseases in the young, and trouble with the mammary glands, and indigestion, if practicable also, in the dam, we should exercise good judgement, and be satisfied to take considerable trouble when weaning the colt.

In most cases the mammary apparatus is still quite active, and a considerable quantity of milk is being secreted when the owner decides that it is time to "wean the colt." The colt, in addition to the grass and grain that it has been consuming, has thus far been accustomed to milk also. In fact, milk has been his principal diet, and, if suddenly deprived of it he cannot avoid fretting, and failing in condition. Then again, the secretion of milk in the mare will not cease all at once, and, unless the glands be relieved of it, mammitis will be the result. Instead of milking the mare by hand, and, of course, making no use of it, as is usually done, the colt should get the benefit. Our idea of the proper method of weaning is as follows: When it is decided that the colt shall be weaned, he should be placed in a comfortable box stall, by himself, or with other colts that are being weaned. There should be no mangers or boxes into which he can rear or jump, and probably injure himself, and the door and walls should be so high that he cannot jump over them or get his fore feet over. The dam should be tied, in a stall, or better, if convenient, kept in a box stall, not necessarily far removed from her foal. In fact, the writer has made a practice of having the stalls adjoining, so that the dam and foal can see and hear each other, but cannot get together. Whether or not the mare be required for work, she should be taken to the colt's stall, or better, the colt lead to the dam's stall, and allowed to remain for 15 to 20 minutes three times daily for a week or longer. Leading the colt to the dam's stall, is a good system to begin and the first lessons in training for future usefulness. During the second week, twice daily will be sufficient to leave them together, and one time only daily, gradually shortening the length of the visit until the maximal becomes practically inactive. In this manner each growing creature accustomed to be separated from the other. The change of diet for the colt is gradual, as he will not relish the idea of the milk that otherwise would be wasted. It also largely obviates danger of mammitis in the mare, and the glands gradually become inactive. In the meantime the colt should be allowed about all the well-saved clover, hay and chopped or rolled oats, that he will consume. A satisfactory and palatable mixture is made by putting a little oil-cake and the ration of oats in a pail, and pouring some boiling water on it, covering with a rubber sheet and allowing it to stand until morning, then preparing another feed for the evening. This, with a ration of whole oats, with a carrot or two at noon, in addition to the amount of whole hay he will consume, usually gives excellent results. Of course, this requires some time and trouble, and when this is not convenient the colt will do very well without the preparation of food noted. When practicable, the addition of cow's milk gives excellent results, but this is often not easily obtainable.

After the colt has ceased looking for his dam, he should be allowed to take daily exercise in a yard or paddock, and his feet should be trimmed at least monthly. Usually under these conditions, the wear will be equal to the growth, and if not attended to, the feet will become abnormal in size and shape, which may permanently injure him. Some people have taught to be trimmed to the natural size and shape, as conditions demand.—Prof. J. H. Reed, V.S., O. A. College, Guelph.

Canada Not Hostile to Russia.

OTTAWA, Aug. 31.—There is no need for resolutions or discussion of hostile action being taken by Canada against Russia, according to Premier Meighen. Speaking on the subject of resolutions of protest against such hostile action, which have been passed at various meetings, Mr. Meighen said to the Canadian Press that there was no reason whatever for the discussion of the subject or for the passing of such resolutions. The subject had not been as much as mentioned, and manifestly no such action could be in contemplation.

When The Day Is Over

When the hours of toil and care and the worries of everyday life have dragged you down, made you unhappy, and them is a nothing in life but headache, backache and worry, turn to the right prescription. It's one gotten up by Dr. Pierce fifty years ago.

Everything growing out of the ground seems intended for some use in establishing natural conditions. Dr. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., long since found out what is naturally best for women's diseases. He learned it all through treating thousands of cases. The result of his studies was a medicine called Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. This medicine is made of vegetable growths that nature surely intended for backache, headache, weakening pains, irregularities, and for the many disorders common to women in all ages of life.

Orillia, Ont.:—"I suffered from a bad case of woman's trouble with backache, nervousness, disordered digestion, irregularity and I had great pain all the time, sometimes I would faint at my work. I had one physician after another but they did me no good. I then took Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and it fixed me up all right, I took much better and feel fine. I will recommend the 'Prescription' to all suffering as I did."—MRS. MAYBELLE B. GRATRIX, 115 Albert St.

DANGER OF WASTE LANDS.

Cultivation Great Aid In Destruction of Grasshoppers.

More than the usual number of complaints of injuries from grasshoppers have been received this year, says L. Caesar, Provincial Entomologist. In every case investigated, the insects have been in waste lands or old pastures and from these breeding places spread to cultivated fields. This, of course, suggests one of the best methods of prevention—cultivation of waste lands. It has been found that if the eggs are buried five inches beneath the soil the young grasshoppers from these cannot reach the surface and therefore must perish; hence, as eggs are laid late summer and autumn, ploughing in October or early spring destroys countless numbers of the insects.

Wherever these steps have not been taken or are impracticable and the grasshoppers are present in sufficient numbers to cause serious loss, they can be successfully combatted without much excense or labor by the use of the "Poison Bran Bait," as follows:

Formula—Bran, 20 lbs.; Paris Green, ½ to 1 lb.; molasses, 2 quarts; oranges or lemons, 2 or 3 fruits; water, 2 gallons.

Mix the bran and Paris green dry in a tub or large receptacle or even on a cement floor, squeeze the juice of the lemons or oranges into the water and run the rind and pulp through a meat-chopper and add these also. Pour the molasses into the liquid and mix well. Then gradually add the sweetened water to the bran and Paris green, stirring thoroughly at the same time. Continue the stirring until all the bran is moist and will fall through the fingers like sawdust. This work, to save time, should be done the day before treating the fields. Then in the morning early, between 5 and 6 o'clock, scatter the mixture very thinly around the borders of the crop to be protected, and also wherever the grasshoppers are present, treating all infested surroundings for about twenty rods back to prevent the grasshoppers coming from waste lands. Do not apply during rain and do not apply too low an hour or two after the treatment, repeat the next morning. Usually, under favorable conditions, one treatment is sufficient, but sometimes a second or even a third application is necessary. As 5 lbs. of the poisoned bran is sufficient for one acre, the mixture should be applied very thinly after the manner of sowing grass seed—a single handful covering a square yards. Grasshoppers devour about and thus readily find the substance. They are also attracted to it from a considerable distance.

Do not look for results until about two days after the work has been done. Then the grasshoppers, cattle or sheep when the bran is applied as directed, but poultry should not be allowed in the field for a day or two.

Where bran cannot be obtained, fair results may be secured by using the following substitutes:

Sawdust, 20 lbs.; Paris green, ½ to 1 lb.; salt, ½ lb.; water, 2 gals.

The sawdust and Paris green are mixed dry, the salt dissolved in the water and the liquid then added to the poisoned sawdust, which should be carefully mixed until all is moist. It should then be allowed to stand over night and applied just like the bran, early the next morning. Sawdust will not cover quite so much ground as will the poisoned bran, the above amount being sufficient in our experience for not more than about 40 rods, whereas the bran will suffice for four acres.

Soldiers Wear Whiskers.

There are signs that whiskers are being cultivated again. It is a remarkable thing that, although both King George and his father, King Edward, were bearded, very few of their subjects followed their lead.

In fact, from the days of the later Stuarts to the Crimean War, all Europe was clean-shaven as well as bewigged. The bearded warriors of the Crimea brought martial fashion, and for forty years society occupied itself in devising new fashions in whiskers.

Sothern, the actor, made the Dundreary style the rage, and a dude of the sixties was hardly complete without side-tassels. The moustache of Napoleon the Third came the Imperial, a little tuft on the chin. The same period also saw the rise of the Dundreary whisker, which could be worn worn both with and without the moustache, while Hodge compromised between beard and no beard by shaving his chin and jaw and upper lip and leaving a fringe round the throat as a sort of natural muffler.

The twentieth century has gradually returned to the clean shave, but the war brought back the military moustache, reduced, in most cases, to the smallest dimensions.—Answers.

POTATO POINTERS.

Leave Tubers In Ground Until Fully Matured.

Usually the early potatoes are not the best keepers, and except for seed purposes are not kept in large quantities. It is sometimes said that immature tubers make the best seed. The writer is not prepared to discuss the matter, except to say that he has seen excellent crops from both mature and immature tubers. One thing, however, is certain when the crop is lifted before it has fully matured much of the possible yield is lost to the grower, and whether for seed purposes or for food the tubers will not keep so well as when mature.

We are at present concerned with the early crop, and not with the main or late crop. This, however, makes no difference. We should not generally lift the crop until the haulms are quite dead. At which time we can rest assured that the food material, your food and mine, has been fully transferred from stems to tubers, and that the latter have made all the growth that is possible.

Potatoes should not be left in a damp soil any length of time after they have ripened; nothing can be quicker in leaving them than. Lift them and store them thinly in a dark dry place until they are dry, after which they may be stored in barrels or boxes for use as desired. These remarks do not apply to winter storage. They are made only for the information of those who have only a few early potatoes on their plots.

During the present year it has been gratifying to see the increase in the number of vegetable gardens over those which existed before the war, and while there are not so many as during the war, the quality of the vegetables is if anything better. This is largely as a result of experience on the part of the war gardener. Another thing of importance is that the amateur has learned to discriminate in the choice of varieties, consequently subjects which have little food value are not grown, thus the grower has more time to devote to the production of staple crops. Now is the time for the gardener to check up the good and the worthless subjects, and to decide what he will do next year. Perhaps it would be advantageous to double a certain crop or to reduce another by half, according to their values. Notes of all these things should be made; the memory cannot be trusted entirely in such matters.

When the crops are in full bearing a better idea of what space will be necessary for each may be obtained than when they are removed from the plot. It is also easy to ascertain the positions in which they seem to do best. Notes along these lines will be found helpful, for from them the gardener may during winter plan his garden for next year.

Fertilized Crops.

Should we apply fertilizers carrying quantities of plant food constituents exactly the same as the plant takes up? Suppose a common fertilizer for mula is 2-8-2. When we add all the nitrogen we find the crop of the plant food taken out by the crop is approximately 4-2-2. Now why the discrepancy between a fertilizer analysis and the composition of plant food? First—Because much nitrogen is formed in the soil and by the bacteria on the roots of legumes fixed by the free nitrogen gathering bacteria of the soil. There is, therefore, no need of adding all the nitrogen that the crop takes up, since nature in her laboratory — the soil — is manufacturing much plant food. Second—When it comes to phosphoric acid, immensely more phosphoric acid is necessary to be added than is found in the soil, because in the process of reversion much phosphoric acid is held by the soil and is not given up by the growing crop. Third—Potash usually regenerates in quantity closely allied to that taken out by the crop. Under certain circumstances potash may form insoluble compounds, as may phosphoric acid, in the soil, especially in soils where there is a lack of lime, but where iron and aluminum are present. Hence the necessity of keeping up the lime, which will have a bookkeeping process which deters the soil from doing its best.

The plant needs a balanced ration. Study the plant's needs of the soil. If the crop is grown for bulk and top, such as grass and hay crops, nitrogen is the plant food to emphasize. If any other bulky crop, nitrogen is the product desired, emphasize phosphoric acid; for root crops, potash is the one to use. For grain foods necessary to emphasize.—Prof. H. O. Buckman, Cornell University.

The War's Oldest Soldier.

The oldest soldier who served in the war is said to be William Clarke, who is now living at Shanley Green, near Guildford. When in his 73rd year, 60 years after he enlisted in the Royal Welsh Regiment, he joined the Royal Defence Corps, and served at Felixstowe until invalided. He is in his 76th year.

IN NEW TAFFETAS

Individual Styles Are the Rule This Season.

Frocks Constructed on Lines to Suit One's Figure, Resulting in Greater Satisfaction.

With captivating crispness do the newest taffetas swish their way to fame, and indeed one needs but little inspiration to create lovely frocks, so simple are the modes and so lovely the materials. Individual styles with lines to suit one's figure are the rule this season.

One frock that was especially designed for the girl with rather plump proportions was really a masterpiece for clever lines. Navy blue with smart touches of brick red and overdrapes of georgette crepe form a pleasing alliance, but it was the model selected that was so appropriate.

This stout figure frock was a long waisted affair, semi-fitted to the hips, and there completed by a scant two piece skirt, also of the taffeta. And there was a bit of a frill with a dash of brick red trimming at the square neck.

Over the skirt was a full tunic of the embroidered crepe looped under at the bottom, zouave effect, and finished with an elastic band. As a final note she added a narrow sash to the taffeta and tied it back and allowed the ends to float quite gayly at the bottom of the skirt.

The slimness of the jeunne fille would be improved by a smartly draped frock of taupe taffeta and French blue ribbon. The front of the of course, the regulation skirt which is still worn for sport wear—most of this blouses have something below the waistline. Sometimes they terminate in a wide girdle that extends to the hips.

PARIS STYLES IN BLOUSES

Overgarment in Contrasting Color to Tailored Suit Is Distinctive Note in Fashions.

The blouse in contrasting color to the skirt or to the tailored suit is the distinctive note in fashions in blouses for spring in Paris, says the Dry Goods Economist. With practically no exceptions, blouses worn with suits and tailored suits are shown in brilliant contrasting colors. The day of the blouse in matching crepe for wear with suits is finished and the colored blouse in taffeta, voile or crepe de chine, or the blouse in bold striped silk tussah or linen is now the great vogue.

Quantities of blouses in waxed satin and in kid, covered with an all-over embroidery in contrasting color, are featured at Reboux for wear with suits. These blouses are simply made, are in slip-over-the-head style, have rounded necks, and short sleeves, the bodices are flat at the front and, as a rule, close in surplice fashion at the back. The belt is cut in one with the bodice section and buttons snugly around the hips at either side.

The skirt, hip design, and sleeves of this model all have peculiarities which make the dress distinctive. It is made of dark green taffeta with lighter bindings.

bodice crosses itself at the breast with religious fervor, but is quite frivolous when it comes to the skirt. It begins demurely with an underskirt of harmony proportions, not too long, and then bangs a looped tunic over it.

TURBAN TRIMMED WITH TULLE

Headgear of Gray Hemp Embellished With Jet Band Forming Veil-like Trimming.

Lovers of Paris modes a fashion writer, notes a charming little turban, from which the illustration is drawn. It is of gray hemp trimmed with a jet embroidered band of black tulle, forming a veil-like trimming across the front and sides and continuing across the back where it is tied in a wide Alsatian bow.

Another close-fitting hat is of shiny white straw, with a brim turned up in the back and front and extending at the horizontal points at either side. Just above the points are bright pink roses. Over the crown of the hat is draped a large square veil of black net with an applique of lace. The entire drapery is gathered to the left side to be swathed about the neck and chin of the wearer.

Not all of the lace trimmed hats are small. One model, which is very large and roomy, is simply the crown, has a flowing veil held to the crown with a narrow ribbon.

Some Colors You See.

Egyptian designs and Egyptian colorings are leaders for spring, and the dressmakers have gone back to real Egyptian prints and paintings for their inspiration, and the colors that seem to take precedence are chandron, which is a copper color, a peculiar opaque blue, and color and green. Then there is a second blue that suggests the turquoise. The green is sometimes confused with jade, but as a matter of fact it is lighter-toned and only yellower than the color actually seen in Chinese jade.

EYELET EMBROIDERY IS CHIC

Stuo, this combination of rose eyelet trimming and lace top. From all indications it is safe to predict that eyelet embroidery is to be a very popular feature of the summer gowns.

THE CHIC BLOUSE

Garment Essential to Complete Spring Wardrobe.

Short Sleeves Preferred and Mode Is Collarless With Neckline Deeper at Shoulders.

Your task of buying your spring suit is not really completed until you have invested in at least one blouse to go with it, observes a fashion correspondent. And, although there is no further doubt concerning the return of the lingerie blouse to favor, still you know that this type of blouse is not the one to select to be worn under your suit jacket. It is sure to show creases when you take off the jacket. Moreover, if you do take off the jacket you want a blouse that gives an unbroken line with the suit skirt, and this cannot be accomplished if you are wearing a white blouse.

It really is wise to have one blouse that almost exactly matches the suit, and the new material selected for such a blouse is tricolette or some other sort of knitted silk fabric, which seems proof against wrinkles. This season the short sleeve, elbow or shorter, will be the preference for these blouses and usually the mode is collarless with a neckline open at the neck, sometimes deeper at the shoulders than from front to back.

However, the handmade batiste, linen or voile blouse is in high favor and will be worn for summer and resort wear. It reminds one of a decade ago, for now as then the well-dressed women are ordering these handmade blouses in numbers, many women having laid in as large a supply as a dozen, all hand made, for the spring and summer season. They will be worn with the separate sport skirt. Then there are colored wash blouses, dame and green and toast, and these are to be worn often with the separate skirt of white.

The blouse that extends far below the waistline is little in evidence. However, most of the blouses, save the conventional sort of lingerie blouses that have made their appearance and

JET OF NOW AND YEARS AGO

Trimming Decidedly Popular and Found in Many of the Most Interesting Gowns.

Jet is especially in evidence on the little evening caps that they began to wear last winter and that are still considered new enough to be very smart. They consist of bands of jet with perhaps a tassel or other pendant over the side. Sometimes there are two that hang down resembling two great earrings, but in reality they are attached to the bands of the headdress. Then jet trimming is to be found in many of the most interesting gowns. It is positively barbaric at times, and for the young girl, who wants to look dangerous, the young girl who always tremendously admires the vampire in the play, there is nothing so effective as a jet trimmed velvet gown. It is understood, of course, that the black part should be of tulle or lace or something transparent and that there should be sufficient opportunity to see the chest at the arms and shoulders beside or through the back.

Bags of all sort are trimmed with black jet and umbrella handles are likewise so adorned. Though jet bead trimmed slippers have made any headway to speak of, jet buckles are sure to find favor with the American woman, who always thinks more about shoe buckles than does the French woman.

The present rule of jet is rather splendid, surely alluring and perhaps just a little barbaric. Could anything be more different from the jet of your childhood?

You remember jet of those days, do you not? It was a prim and proper adornment then. There was that ensemble great-aunt of yours. For years she possessed and relied on a jet yoke and trimming bands of jet. They were well made and expensive to begin with, and oh, how careful she was that none of the precious black beads should be lost. They adorned her chest black silk frock in rows of pearl drops, something quite as substantial. Sometimes the frock was all ripped up, the jet carefully removed, while the silk was renovated by being sponged in benzine, then the jet was put together again inside out, and the precious jet trimming securely put back. Sometimes there were little extra bits of jet to give a little festive touch. On the whole, it was a form of trimming that never dreamed might ever possess the possibilities that it seems now to show.

HEAVY DEMAND FOR GLOVES

Short Sleeve Vogue Indicates Manufacturers Will Be Unable to Supply Market.

This season's vogue for short sleeves should mean a fortune to glovemakers. The only unfortunate part about the matter, so far as the glove manufacturers are concerned, is that glove fabrics and the labor necessary for their making are so scarce and high, so it is said to be difficult to make enough gloves to meet the demand.

When really warm weather arrives, many women will wear those little short sleeved frocks without gloves, of course, as comfort rules in the final showing in this rather sensible age.

It is interesting and really pleasant, to observe that the very short skirts approved for several seasons are not in evidence this year. Skirts are short enough for comfort, but they are long enough for grace, and because of the added length, women as a whole appear much better dressed. Like practically all extremes, the ultra-short skirt is conspicuous by its absence in this season's fashion line-up.

FASHIONS IN BRIEF

A good color combination is henna brown and navy blue.

It is fashionable to have glove and bag to match and to fringe both.

White chalk beads are particularly attractive on pink georgette.

The smaller the quantity of embroidery on a gown the richer it must be.

Morning dresses of printed Japanese crepe are an interesting fashion development.

Among the new weaves is crepe gabardine, which promises to have as great a vogue as charmeuse. One side is like an ordinary heavy China crepe, the other is a fine gabardine weave.

Coats and skirts made of rubber faced satin are particularly chic. The satin is used on the outside, and the soft rubber surface, which looks like finest kid, is turned back or used for stripping or lapels.
